Frontiersmen Program Slated In Springs, Pa.

Robert Anderson, commonwealth speaker for the Pennsylvania Humanities Council, will present a program about frontiersmen on Monday, Sept. 24 at 7:30 p.m. at the Folk Meeting House in Springs, Pa.

Sent by eastern interests to negotiate with American Indians in the Upper Ohio River Valley, frontiersmen have been traditionally seen as heroic or romantic figures. In reality, their lives were much more than caricatures, and they regularly faced both mundane and deadly situations.

Anderson discusses the details of the frontiersmen's daily lives, from what they ate to the intricate knowledge they needed to negotiate with American Indians.

He is adjunct professor of history at Penn State University, Altoona College. The program is sponsored by the Springs Historical Society, and is free to the public. The presentation is a program of the Pennsylvania Humanities Council, supported in part by a grant from the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission. The Folk Meeting House is located on Springs Road in Springs, Pa.

Steven Koehn Named Maryland State Forester

J. Charles Fox, secretary of the Maryland Department of Natural Resources (DNR), announced this week that he has appointed Steven W. Koehn as state forester and director of the Forest Service. Koehn (pronounced "Kane") has served as acting state forester since February. "I expect that Steven Koehn's background and expertise will prove to be a tremendous asset to the Department of Natural Resources and the state of Maryland at large," Fox said.

Graduating from the Pennsylvania State University in 1983 with a bachelor of science degree in forest science, Koehn began his career as a consulting forester with James M. Vardaman & Co. Inc., working out of their Columbia, S.C., office. Taking a position with Maryland DNR as the Baltimore County project forester in 1984, he worked his way up through the organization by serving as the supervisor of Forest Resource Management, Forest Stewardship section chief, and most recently as associate director.

As Maryland's state forester, Koehn is responsible for the statewide delivery of all technical and financial forestry assistance on both public and private lands. Maryland's state forestry agency is composed of about 120 classified and contractual employees and has a budget of over $12 million.

Koehn has authored, coauthored, and presented several papers on forestry best management practices and riparian forest buffers. He is a licensed forester, certified tree care expert, member of the Maryland Forests Association, and he represents his agency on the Forestry Workgroup of the Chesapeake Bay Program and MD Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program Technical Committee, and is a founding member of the Partnership for Sustainable Forestry. He joined the society of American Foresters as a student in 1981 and is currently serving as chair of the Maryland/Delaware Division.

Married with two daughters, ages 10 and 12, Koehn coaches soccer and softball, and he teaches forestry-related courses at Johns Hopkins University in the noncredit liberal arts program at the School of Professional Studies in Business Education.

Antiques
by Ralph and Terry Kovel

In the early 1900s, most homes were built with a large porch that faced the street. People sat on the porch and watched the traffic or visited with neighbors. Porch furniture was usually made of wicker. Some had flowered, upholstered cushions. The wicker easily adapted to wet conditions. Pieces made of bamboo were also used. Upholstered furniture was not practical because it could become wet in a rainstorm.

In the 18th century, a porch often faced woods or a lake. It was a cool, quiet place to sit. In the days before wicker furniture was made, wooden chairs and settees that were suitable for indoors as well as outdoors were kept on the porch. George Washington had Windsor chairs on his porch at Mt. Vernon. Today, furniture made of weatherproof plastic is popular for the garden or porch. There are even cushions made of fabrics that shed water.

Q. I just got my father's old Lava lamp. Does it require special care to keep it working?

A. The Lava lamp was introduced in the United States in 1965. It was more a novelty than a lamp. A slowly oozing, colored liquid changed shape when the heat of the lamp made a glob of wax inside rise and fall. Don't light your lamp for more than eight hours — the wax will create a ball. Don't shake the lamp — it will make the water cloudy. Don't ever open the lamp. And keep it away from children and pets — it gets hot.

Tip: To get rid of mildew on wooden furniture, wipe the wood with a cloth dipped in this mixture: 1 cup water with 1 tablespoon bleach and 1 tablespoon liquid dishwashing detergent. Then wipe the wood dry.

New Baby in the House

Q. My daughter and her husband just brought home their beautiful new son. They own two collies, and I worry about the baby's safety around them. Should the dogs be allowed near the baby? Will they get jealous?

A. You shouldn't worry. Collies — like most dogs — are a fairly good-natured breed, and they will not harm the new baby. Given time, they will also adapt to the new routine a baby brings to the house.

Of course, that doesn't mean the baby should be left alone with the dogs, just as he shouldn't be left unsupervised at any other time.

Pets may adapt more quickly when their owners prepare them for the baby's arrival — for example, letting them tour the nursery ahead of time, or bringing home a blanket with the baby's scent so they will recognize it later. Throughout this period, and for the months following baby's arrival, the dogs need training and play time with their owners. This reassures them that they still have a place in the family, and lets them know that the "boss" (the owner) is still in charge.

Since you're the grandmother, you can voice your concerns to the new parents, as long as you do so politely. A question such as, "How are the dogs coping with a new baby in the house?" is not out of line — and since it is open-ended, you will receive a more detailed, and most likely reassuring, answer.

Observe the dogs on your next visit. If your daughter and son-in-law's pets are well cared for, look happy and obey their verbal commands, you have nothing to fear. A couple who takes care of their pets will almost certainly have made preparations for the baby's safety.

• The famous painting "The Last Supper," located in the chapel of Santa Maria delle Grazie in Milan, Italy, is well-known throughout the world. "I PLEDGE MY HEAD TO CLEARER THINKING, my heart to greater loyalty, my hands to larger service, and my health to better living for my club, my community, my country, and my world." Every 4-H member recognizes these words that are central to 4-H's mission. Recently, members of the Oak Hill 4-H of Accident brought the meaning of these words to life. After hearing a presentation from Debbie Stemple about her work with Project Linus, an organization that provides quilts and comforters to ailing members of the community, the Oak Hill members and their families made comforters for the important cause. Pictured above working on a comforter, left to right, are Shaina Custer, Cecalie Georg, Stemple, and Ashley Rodeheaver. Others who worked on the project but are not pictured include Travis Glover, Brandon Georg, Andrew Rodeheaver, Tyler Bowman, Doug Butner, Laura Butner, Heather Thomas, Bradley Rodeheaver, William Herpel, Abby Schmuck, Chelsie Kling, Alecia Bender, Meghan Volkel, Amber Kling, Grace Herpel, Edward Herpel, Chelsie Custer, Sarah Volkel, Abby Sherrard, Russ Thomas, Tracy Bowman, Shane DeWitt, Nicki Bender, Becky Berkebile, Ben Hannibal, Josh Custer, Esther Schmuck, Lacie Berkebile, Dana Hannibal, Sam Sherrard, and Adam Hannibal.

Festive Fare To Be Dished Up For Autumn Glory

Taste-tempting treats to appeal to all palates will be available during the Autumn Glory Festival, October 10-14, from full-course dinners to double-scoop ice cream cones.

Old World German-style food and beverages will be served at the Oktoberfest meal in the Oakland fire hall on Thursday from 4 to 7 p.m. just prior to the OVFD's annual Firemen's Parade and Oktoberfest. For more information, persons may call 301-334-3535.

Everyone is invited to "Celebrate the Glory" at the Mountain Fresh Tailgate Market, with fresh local produce, baked goods, painted pumpkins, and flowers available for purchase. The market will be open at the Mountain Fresh Pavilion in the Oakland town parking lot Friday and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Information is available at 301-334-6960. Admission is free.

Italian cuisine is on the menu Saturday at Dennett Road Elementary School, where PTO members will serve an "all-you-can-eat" dinner of spaghetti, salad, bread, and dessert from 4 to 7 p.m. The cost is $6 for adults and $3 for children.

Festival-goers may sample pit beef, chicken teriyaki, corn dogs, fried plantains, Polish sausages, funnel cakes, cotton candy, and more from the multi-cultural fare to be offered by nearly 20 food vendors on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. in Oakland. Visitors planning to watch the parade on Saturday will be able to come early or stay late, and to dine while enjoying the musical entertainment and displays throughout Oakland.

On many Autumn Glory Festival lists of "things-not-to-be-missed" is the annual No-Hands Sundae Eating Contest. Competitors will face off against a three-scoop dish of homemade ice cream with toppings and whipped cream. This challenge will be held at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Lakeside Creamery, 20282 Garrett Highway, along Deep Creek Lake. The fee for contestants is $4.75, with proceeds to benefit Big Brothers Big Sisters. There is no charge for spectators.

The festival is presented by the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce.

ON AS PERSONAL NOTE
by Lucretia Sines

Still stunned and shaken from the events of Sept. 11, the terrorist attacks on this country are still a topic of conversation throughout this community. Although the confusion of last Tuesday is gone, the questions still remain. Why, how, who?

I was working at S&S Market when my daughter came in the store and told Freda and me that two planes had just crashed into the World Trade Center. We couldn't really imagine what was happening. It was so frustrating not to be near a radio or TV and having to rely on the gas station attendant across the street yelling over to me to keep me informed of the events, as unbelievable as they were. News was also relayed to us by means of patrons who forced themselves away from their TVs long enough to come to the store. (I think cigarette sales were up that day.)

After the plane crashed in Pennsylvania, many scared parents got their children out of school. The school had been ordered into lock-down and students were dismissed early. Patrol cars were even seen patrolling the Friendsville area. Confusion for sure... Jack and Carol Edmiston awaited word from their daughter who works at the Pentagon (Turned out that she had taken the day off to take her dog to the vet.) Margaret Frost was concerned about her son who was scheduled to attend a meeting at the Pentagon that day (He was fine.) James Spear's niece was planning to tour the Worl

Farming On The Mountaintop

Mid-Atlantic Director, Farmland Trust, To Speak At Local Dinner

Mary M. Heinricht, Mid-Atlantic director of the American Farmland Trust, will be the featured speaker for the annual dinner hosted by the Garrett Soil Conservation District and scheduled for Thursday, Oct. 4, at 7 p.m. at the Pleasant Valley Community Center.

"With the increasing growth of the county, the loss of farmland and our rural landscape is becoming a concern," said Brooks Hamilton, board member.

"Managing growth and assessing the impacts of development is becoming increasingly important as Maryland moves to implement commitments contained in the Bay Programs Chesapeake 2000 Agreement" said Dave Thomas, another board member.

American Farmland Trust is a national organization that focuses its efforts to stop the loss of productive farmland and to promote farming practices that lead to a healthy environment. AFT's programs include public education, technical assistance in policy development, and directing farmland protection projects. As Mid-Atlantic director, Heinricht oversees AFT activities in Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey.

Prior to joining AFT, Heinricht worked as the primary spokesperson for the Southeastern Association for Virginia's Environment (SAVE) in Tidewater, Va. She was the principal author of the Virginia Beach Agricultural Reserve Program, the first publicly funded purchase of development rights program established in Virginia. The Chesapeake Bay Program recognized the ARP program for Community Innovation in 1996. She has worked throughout Virginia over the last decade to educate the public about farming, rural economic development issues, and community growth management tools. She has served on several statewide study committees examining natural resource and land use issues.

Last year Heinricht worked closely with the Virginia Farm Bureau Federation in promotion of the Virginia Agricultural Vitality Program, which was approved by the General Assembly in the 2000 session. This program will establish a Virginia Farm Link Program to address the challenges of intergenerational farm transfers. It will develop guidelines for Purchase of Development Rights Programs for Virginia localities and make recommendations regarding funding for the purchase of agricultural conservation easements in the Commonwealth. In 2001, the General Assembly established the Office of Farmland Preservation, which will continue the Agricultural Vitality Program within the Virginia Department of Agriculture.

Heinricht's previous professional experience includes regional and environmental planning, land development projects, and management consulting. She administered the Virginia Beach Chesapeake Bay Program and served on the local bay board. In the past, she helped develop review guidelines for environmental impact statements for local government and worked on the design of several new town projects. She is an expert at the design and implementation of public education and outreach programs.

Heinricht has been honored with a Partnership Award from the Virginia Chapter of the Nature Conservancy and the Conservation Award from the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

She holds degrees in Regional Planning and Landscape Architecture from the Lowthorpe School of Landscape Architecture at the Rhode Island School of Design.

Anyone interested in attending the dinner should call the District office at 301-334-6951 and request a reservation form. Reservations cannot be taken after September 27 and will not be available at the door. The meal will consist of baked steak, mashed potatoes with gravy, green beans, garden salad, noodles, applesauce, rolls, beverage, and cake with ice cream. The cost is $8 for adults and $4.50 for children between the ages of 4 and 10. Children under 4 years old may dine free.

Farm Safety Week Focuses On Preventing Injuries To Youth

From the field to the farm site, agriculture is a dangerous occupation. In an ongoing effort to create greater safety awareness on the farm, the National Safety Council (NSC) is again sponsoring National Farm Safety and Health Week, Sept. 16-22.

The American Farm Bureau Federation and American Farm Bureau Foundation for Agriculture recognize the importance of and offer support to this campaign. Farm Bureau is also committed to continuing to offer special programs encouraging farm safety.

"Farm and ranch families are the backbone of America. Keeping them safe is a major concern, so farm injuries are a tragedy we all hope to prevent," said Marsha Purcell, managing director of AFBFA. "In addition to supporting the efforts of other organizations to create greater, farm safety awareness, Farm Bureau has long offered a variety of programs at our county, state, and national levels. Farm safety camps, child safety seat programs, farm safety reviews, and tractor rollover prevention programs are all examples of how our grassroots volunteers incorporate the farm safety message throughout the year."

This year's National Farm Safety and Health Week theme is "Kids #1 in 2001" in order to place a special emphasis on child safety. According to NSC, about 100 children and youth die in farm work injuries annually in the United States. In order to keep children safe on the farm, the week will focus on the dangers encountered in farm work, including those stemming from transport on farm tractors, grain transportation in wagons, and activities in and around grain storage bins. In addition, the dangers that may arise from chores involving farm animals, including work near farm ponds and manure storage facilities, will be highlighted.

"The idea of a family business truly exists on America's farms and ranches since children are often very involved in their families' agriculture business," Purcell said. "Unfortunately, this also creates the potential for danger, making safety a top priority for all family members."

While safety is a concern throughout the year, fall harvest is an especially high-risk period. Since National Farm Safety and Health Week coincides with this active time on the farm, both rural and urban residents should be more aware of safety concerns, especially increased farm-related activities on rural roads. Farm families also will be encouraged to consider the effects of stress, the necessity for balanced sleep and nutrition, plus extra care when working around storage bins, wagons, and other equipment.

"Harvest is an extremely busy time on the farm," Purcell said. "We want to make sure producers keep safety in mind."

Efforts such as Farm Safety Week seem to be paying off in agriculture. According to the Census of Fatal Occupational Injuries conducted by the Labor Department, fatal work injuries in agriculture, forestry, and fishing dropped by 12 percent in 2000, reaching the lowest levels recorded for those industries. That decrease occurred despite an increase in the number of fatal work injuries in landscape and horticultural services. While those statistics are encouraging, Purcell said farm safety remains a concern.

"Even one death resulting from a farm injury is too many. Nearly everyone in agriculture knows someone who has been hurt or killed while working on a farm. That's something we must continue to try to prevent," Purcell said. "America's farm and ranch families take great pride in providing the safest, most abundant and affordable food supply in the world. They also take pride in doing that at the highest level of safety possible."

For more information on the NSC and National Farm Safety and Health Week, persons may visit www.nsc.org/farmsafe.htm. In addition to NSC-sponsored activities and events, several state farm bureaus are planning special farm safety programs. Persons may contact state farm bureau offices for information on special events planned or visit the AFBF web site at www.fb.org for links to state farm bureau web sites.

Gardening Tips

If there is a threat of frost at night, harvest your cucumber, eggplant, melon, okra, pepper, and summer squash so the fruits are not damaged by the frost.

Tomatoes need an average daily temperature of 65°F or more for ripening. If daytime temperatures consistently are below this, pick the fruits that have begun to change color and bring them inside to ripen. If you are rescuing green tomatoes from a frost and plan to allow them to finish ripening indoors, be sure to select fruits that have changed color from the darker green of immature tomatoes to the lighter color of the mature green stage. If picked before this color break, the tomato will rot instead of ripen. You will be on the safe side if you wait for a hint of red to appear. Use under-ripe fruit for pickling.

Place a ripe apple in a closed container with green tomatoes to encourage the tomatoes to turn red. Ripe apples give off ethylene gas that causes tomatoes to ripen.

Plant garlic and shallots now for harvest next August. Plant in a sunny spot in well-drained soil, placing the tips 2 inches beneath the soil surface.

Dig horseradish just before the ground freezes. The tops should be trimmed from the roots to within one inch of the crown.

Remove any diseased or insect-infested plant material from your garden; it may harbor over-wintering stages of disease and insect pests. If you leave this plant material in your garden, you are leaving diseases and insects that will begin to reproduce again next spring and add to next year's pest problem.

Dig parsnips and Jerusalem artichokes after hard frosts have sweetened them.

Many disease-causing viruses over-winter in the roots of perennial weeds. Tomato mosaic virus over-winters in the roots of ground cherry, horsenettle, jimson weed, nightshade, and bittersweet; cucumber mosaic virus lives in the roots of milkweed, catnip, and pokeweed; bean mosaic over-winters in white sweet clover roots; and many cabbage diseases spread from wild members of the cole family. So, from the aspect of disease control, it is evident that a good fall cleanup is essential.

Hot peppers store well dry. Pull the plants and hang them up, or pick the peppers and thread on a string. Store in a cool, dry place.

Cure pumpkins, butternut, and Hubbard squash at temperatures between 70° to 80° F for two to three weeks immediately after harvest. After curing, store them in a dry place at 55° to 60° F. If stored at 50° F or below, pumpkins and squash are subject to damage by chilling. At temperatures above 60°F, they gradually lose moisture and become stringy.

2000 Report On Maryland Ag. Stats Released

Last year's rainfall helped produce higher-than-expected production for most crops in Maryland. The wholesale value of Maryland floraculture crops was up 17 percent from last year, and production of regular ice cream rose two percent. Broiler production dropped, but continued to lead the state's agricultural cash receipts. These are just a few of the thousands of statistics the Maryland Department of Agriculture and USDA's Maryland Agricultural Statistics Service (MASS) published in the Agriculture in Maryland Summary for 2000-2001.

"Thanks to the cooperation of farmers, representatives from agribusinesses, and others associated with Maryland agriculture, MASS is able to provide timely, accurate, and useful facts to help the agricultural community make sound business decisions," said state statistician Ray Garibay.

The report summarizes statistics that MASS gathers from producers throughout the year. The facts are of value to farmers as they strive to remain competitive in the world agricultural markets and adapt to changing consumer demands. Garibay says policy makers will find the information valuable for shaping local, state, and national policies affecting food, farms, natural resource conservation, capital infrastructure, trade, and employment policy. Those with other interests in Maryland's $17.6 billion agricultural industry will find the information useful as well, he said.

A quick overview points out that in the year 2000, Maryland's 2.1 million agricultural acres were divided into 12,400 farms averaging 169 acres. Gross farm income was $1.75 billion. Farm production expenses totaled just over $1 billion, leaving a total net farm income in Maryland of just over $400 million. Gross income averaged $141,210 per farm and a net per farm income was $33,036.

To obtain a free copy of the report, persons may call Maryland Agricultural Statistics Service at 410-841-5740 or log on to http://www.nass.usda.gov/md/rlsetoc.htm.

Ethanol Workshop Is Rescheduled For October 11

In light of the recent tragedies suffered in Washington and New York, the Maryland Ethanol Workshop originally scheduled for Sept. 13 had to be postponed until Thursday, Oct. 11. This event, sponsored by the U.S. Department of Energy, the Maryland Department of Agriculture, the Maryland Department of the Environment, and the Regional Biomass Energy Program, is a part of a series of workshops being held in many states across the country.

On the agenda for the ethanol workshop will be the release of final results from the ethanol feasibility study commissioned by the Maryland Grain Producers Utilization Board (MGPUB). This study, exploring the possibility of Maryland constructing its own ethanol plant, has gained support since first-phase results proved to be "very favorable."

Joseph Mullhausen, president of the MGPUB, stated, "After hearing of the horrific events which occurred in Washington and New York, certainly cancellation of this event was necessary. More then ever, I think an event of this magnitude makes the public take a step back and look at the big picture. It was only hours after states in the Midwest started reporting heavily inflated gas prices because of the uncertainty of crude oil."

Gas stations in Kansas and Oklahoma reported gas prices as high as $5 per gallon. It was stated that the uncertainty of crude oil shipments and probable halt was imminent. Though responsibility of the terrorism has not been decided, impact on consumers became evident.

"We have known for a long time that our dependency on foreign oil was a gamble. When an upset happens, in many ways the hands of the United States are tied when dealing with the foreign oil markets. Ethanol is a product that can be produced here in the United States, used in the United States, and our country's citizens can reap its benefits," added Mullhausen.

Ethanol has begun to take on a charge of its own in the past months. Supporters, including President Bush, have realized the potential benefits of ethanol. "A renewable, clean burning fuel produced here in the United States certainly offers great appeal. Its production from starched based products such as barley, wheat, or corn offers aid to a lagging agricultural economy, in addition to improving air quality for our environment," Mullhausen said.

Many ethanol plants in the Midwest have been successfully operating for a number of years. Since fuel shortages in recent months have occurred and the ban of the fuel oxygenate MTBE in many states, the use of ethanol to fill these voids has gained momentum. The proposed ethanol plant being studied in Maryland would produce 15 million gallons of ethanol per year and would run primarily on barley and small grains. A plant of this size is estimated to cost $30 million.

"Our (MGPUB) sincerest sympathies go out to everyone affected by the events of Sept. 11. If any good can come from this, let it be that our country becomes even stronger. Becoming stronger and more self-sufficient in our fuel markets is a good beginning," Mullhausen concluded.

Bachtel, Myers Elected To SS Directors Board

Carl Bachtel of Horse Shoe Run, W.Va., and Herbert Myers of Kitzmiller were elected to the local board of directors at the Southern States annual membership meeting of Oakland Co-op, held in Oakland on September 7. More than 130 stockholder-members and their families attended.

Gary Fratz of Accident was elected chairman of the board, while Randall Steyer of Oakland was named vice chairman.

Elected to the Southern States Farm Home Advisory Committee were: Laura Mason of Oakland and Laah Broadwater of Swanton.

With the theme "Working to Make the Business of Farming Pay Better," the local meeting also included a report by Bill Kraft of Buckhannon, W.Va., Southern States' district manager, on major developments at the cooperative during the past year.

Reviewing local operations and services was Bob Everett, Oakland Co-op manager. He reported that total operating volume for the past year was about $3,720,000.

The session also included a special recognition ceremony for the newly elected and retiring board members and Farm Home Advisory Committee members. Those retiring include: Ray Miller, Randall Lacy, and Troy Gnegy from the board. Retiring members of FHAC were Rachel Miller and Ellen Shillingburg, both of Oakland.

Other highlights of the meeting included: entertainment by the Paul Petersheim family, door prizes, and words from Charlie Wilfong, member of Southern States board of directors.

Southern States, founded in 1923, is a farmer-owned cooperative operating in 25 states stretching from Maine to Louisiana.

Farmers Have A Good Week For Harvesting Crops

With the exception of showers on Friday, last week's dry weather was ideal for harvesting crops. Precipitation last week ranged from no rain in St. Mary's County to 1.3 inches measured in Queen Anne's County. All counties have received below normal amounts of rainfall for September so far. Departures from normal for the month to date range from .6 inches below average in Queen Anne's County to 2.0 inches below average in St. Mary's County. Maryland farmers had an average of 6.1 days last week that were suitable for fieldwork.

While vegetable harvesting activities are coming to a close, plenty of late season crops remain to be harvested. Sixty-two percent of the corn crop is mature, 10 percent more than last year, and 17 percent ahead of the five-year average. Twelve percent has been harvested for grain, 1 percent ahead of last year, but 3 percent less than average. Corn for silage is 57 percent harvested, 19 percent ahead of last year, and 9 percent more than average.

The dry weather was also ideal for harvesting fourth cutting hay. Seventy-four percent of fourth cutting alfalfa hay has been harvested, progressing 11 percent ahead of the previous week, 24 percent ahead of last year, and 23 percent ahead of the five-year average. All other hay, fourth cutting, is 45 percent harvested, progressing 13 percent ahead of the previous week, 15 percent ahead of last year, and 14 percent ahead of average.

Topsoil moisture continues to decline due to the dry weather. Topsoil moisture is rated 56 percent adequate, 35 percent short, and 9 percent very short. Subsoil moisture is now 61 percent adequate, 25 percent short, and 14 percent very short.

OTT Slates Auditions For Fall Musical

Our Town Theatre will hold auditions for the musical A Sanders Family Christmas at the theatre on Friday, Sept. 28, 7-9 p.m.; Saturday, Sept. 29, 10 a.m.-noon; and Sunday, Sept. 30, 1-3 p.m. According to Jane Avery, director, the production will go on stage for 12 performances in November.

A sequel to Smoke on the Mountain, one of OTT's most popular productions, A Sanders Family Christmas is about the Sanders family's return to Mt. Pleasant, N.C.

"It's Christmas Eve, 1941, and Reverend Oglethorpe has invited the family to the Baptist Church to sing and get the congregation into the down-home holiday spirit before the boys, including one of the Sanderses' own, are shipped off to World War II," Avery said. "More than two dozen Christmas carols, many of them vintage hymns, as well as stories from the family, keep the audience laughing, clapping, and singing along with the bluegrass Christmas favorites. Richly entertaining, this heart-warming musical brings cheer to its audiences."

There are seven major roles, as well as some minor parts for musicians. The cast consists of one female adult, two female teens, one male teen, and three male adults. Susan Peterson is the musical director, and Ben Sincell is the scene and lighting designer.

A Sanders Family Christmas was written by Connie Ray, funded by the Garrett County Arts Council and the Maryland State Arts Council, and produced with special permission from Samuel French Inc.

Avery said she encourages all interested actors and musicians to try out. If the times stated above are not convenient for auditions, persons may call the theatre at 301-334-5640 to plan special audition times.

GLAF CONCERT POSTPONED — The Chamber Orchestra Kremlin, which was scheduled to perform on Saturday, Sept. 22, as part of the Garrett Lakes Arts Festival program series, is now unable to get to Garrett County in light of the recent terrorism events in New York and Washington. The concert has been rescheduled for Wednesday, Nov. 7, at 8 p.m. in the Garrett Community College auditorium. For more information, persons may contact the GLAF office at 301-387-3082.

"Civil War Spy" Will Speak In Grant County

The Grant County Arts Council will present an enactment of "Emma Edmonds, Civil War Spy," by actress Karen Vuranch, on Thursday, Sept 28, at 7 p.m. at the Moomau Library in Petersburg, W.Va. This event is supported with additional financial assistance from the Office of the Secretary, West Virginia Department of Education and the Arts.

Emma Edmonds, Civil War soldier, spy, and heroine, led an exciting and unconventional life for a young woman in the mid-1800s. At 17, to escape an arranged marriage, she fled to Canada from the U.S., dressed as a traveling Bible salesman. When the American Civil War began, she continued her disguise as a man and enlisted in the Union Army, later earning the reputation as a brilliant spy for the Union forces.

This is one of the many available character presentations offered through the West Virginia Humanities Council's "History Alive!" program. At the end of Ms. Edmond's talk, the audience may ask her questions. At the end of this question-and-answer period, Ms. Vuranch will come out of character, and the audience may ask her questions about how she researched and developed her characterization of Emma Edmonds.

Enactors for this and other "History Alive!" programs are required to research their character thoroughly, using writing, speeches, and biographies and to use, whenever possible, the character's own words.

The West Virginia Humanities Council is a private, not-for-profit organization dedicated to providing educational programs in the humanities to schools and communities across the state.

This program is available to interested nonprofit groups such as libraries, museums, and historical societies. For more information, persons may call the West Virginia Humanities Council at 304-346-8500 or visit its web site at www.wvhumanities.org.

The course is designed to convey poetry's written word through dramatic expression, said Wolf. Students will interpret, memorize, and perform one poem individually or in a group. No previous poetry or acting experience is necessary. For further information, or to register for the course, persons may call GCC's Continuing Education and Training Division at 301-387-3069.

Trade Center that day (They finally got word in the late afternoon that she was fine). So many lives were touched by this tragedy. So many lives changed. so many lives taken. The number of missing still grows.

In a short amount of time that day, citizens in our community and all of the U.S. went from periods of shock, disbelief, and fear, to anger and determination. Flags were put up in the streets of Friendsville, the Old Mill Grill closed, schools let out early, and church bells rang to summon those in need of prayer.

On Wednesday, the 12th, Alison's sociology class at GCC discussed the events. Some cried, and all joined in a circle to pray for the wounded, the dead, and the country.

At the end of the week, the teachers at the elementary school gathered in the school parking lot after school, joined hands, and prayed. What else can we do at a time like this?

Emotional worship services were well attended on Sunday. I attended the service at Friendsville United Methodist Church on Sunday, as on other Sundays, but this time with more emotion, needing to feel God's presence, His reassurance. The congregation sang "America the Beautiful" louder and more meaningfully than I have ever experienced. Tears were shed, prayers were spoken. Alison sang "God Bless the USA," bringing the congregation to their feet as they also sang the last chorus.

Now this week we wait. What's next? I think we know, as some of our men have already been called from reserves to stand by. They, too, are in our prayers.

Read. Then Recycle.

In Loving Memory of our Mother, Verna A. Friend, on her birthday, Sept. 19.

Mom was kind to all she met. Even the "hoboes" I don't forget yet. She would feed them something, whatever she could find. Whatever she could give, they didn't mind. What was the reason, I didn't realize. When I would ask, she said it might be Jesus in disguise. No better mother could you ever find. Than one like ours who was so loving and kind.

Sadly missed by all her children

SAT Prep Class Schedule (2001-02)

SAT preparatory classes will be offered after school again this year. The classes are designed to prepare students for the SAT. Two six-week sessions will be offered during the first semester of this school year. Math sessions will be taught by Carol Slagle, and verbal sessions will be taught by Heather Savage. All classes will be conducted in the Media Center at SGHS. Classes are open to all students and will be filled on a "first-come, first-served" basis. Class size is limited to 15 students. Sign up in the guidance office.

The verbal sessions will be offered on Mondays, 4:30 to 5:30 p.m., Sept. 24 to Oct. 29, and Dec. 3 to Jan. 21. The math sessions will be offered Wednesdays, 3:45 to 4:45 p.m., Sept. 26 to Oct. 1, and Dec. 5 to Jan. 16.

New Service-Learning Forms

The new Service-Learning validation forms are available in the guidance office. The old forms will not be accepted after January 1, 2002. The new form is a carbon triplicate form. The white copy is to be turned in to the school guidance office, the yellow copy is the student copy, and the pink copy is the organization's copy. The new forms must be filled out in full before they are given to the site supervisor to sign. If the reflection part of the form is not complete, then the organization will not have the information on the activity students performed. The reflection questions on the new form require students to have knowledge of the organization that they are assisting.

The state Department of Education and Maryland Student Service Alliance has asked all counties in Maryland to begin assessing the quality of service that students are performing. The new Service-Learning validation forms are just one way to show that students are participating in high quality service projects.

Named Director Of GCC's Willy Wisp Center

Melissa Anderson, a teacher at Willy Wisp Early Learning Center of Garrett Community College since the facility opened in 1995, has been appointed the center's director. She succeeds Sherry Costa, who resigned earlier this year.

Anderson holds a bachelor of science degree in elementary education from Texas Tech University with specialization in mathematics and physical education. She holds K-7 teaching certification in Texas and Virginia. Anderson's teaching career began in Blacksburg, Va., where she taught in an accredited child care facility. She moved on to teach mathematics in the Fairfax County (Va.) public school system, where she also coached gymnastics and cheerleading, and sponsored a National Junior Honor Society chapter. While in northern Virginia she completed courses in computer programs and problem solving.

As Willy Wisp's director, Anderson assumes responsibility for the center's pre-school, child care, and after-school programs, and planning for a tutoring program currently under consideration. She also coordinates the summer fun camps and the ski and play programs in cooperation with the Wisp Resort.

The Willy Wisp program is unique because it is highly individualized, Anderson said. "Our goal is to develop children who can think and who are creative. Each child progresses at his or her own rate. We serve children from the age of 2 to the early high school ages. Our program for 2-year-olds has been improved, and we now have more participants."

In addition to the young children who learn and play at Willy Wisp, high school and college students in early childhood education programs can receive practical experience by helping at the center. Several GCC students have enrolled their children through the Earn and Learn program of the college. A resource library for families and children has been located at Willy Wisp where toys and other materials can be checked out.

Anderson's commitment to children is evident in another capacity as a soccer coach for teams in the Mt. Top and Arsenal leagues. She and her husband Steve, a local veterinarian, have three daughters: Sarah, a freshman at Southern High School, and Morgan and Katie, students at Dennett Road School and both graduates of the Willy Wisp program. Persons interested in further information about services available at Willy Wisp may call Anderson at 301-387-4911.

LL CHURCH YOUTH GROUP BENEFITS CAMO — Central American Medical Outreach (CAMO), a nonprofit medical relief organization supported by local orthopedic surgeon Dr. Dona Alvarez, recently received a large donation from the ROCK (Redeemed of the Coming King) youth group of the Loch Lynn Church of God. A bake and yard sale sponsored by the youth group raised over $300, and additional funds provided by the church's mission fund will provide the $1,200 needed for chemotherapy by a specific young Honduran boy. Dr. Alvarez had operated on the youngster on a previous CAMO mission trip, and she had told the youth group of his dire need for further treatment. The ROCK youth group is shown above, and at the right in the photo are ROCK adult leaders Sonya and John Hinebaugh, flanking Dr. Alvarez.

Notes from Bittinger

by Joan Sussman

Like the rest of America, Bittinger was pretty quiet, as we were all stunned at the sad events of last week in New York City and Washington, D.C. I have not heard of any person from Bittinger who had a direct link with the tragedy, except for Bill and Thelma Emory, who had a niece who worked at the Pentagon, but luckily she escaped.

I imagine that Bill and Pete Buckel probably wished they had joined in the rescue effort. Pete, assisted by Meredith Vagnetti, organized a tribute to the rescue work in Emmanuel Lutheran Church on Sunday morning, with an empty chair in the back of the church with a few firefighter clothes. They also collected donations to aid the victims.

Pastor Pat had an adaptive version of the service for the burial of the dead. I am not sure how many households participated in the Friday evening "candle lighting." All the people I asked had done it. My girls dragged out three candles — red, white, and blue. I am surpassed that they came up with a blue one.

Pastor Pat told me about a lovely memorial held in McHenry at the fire hall with two ladders that formed a kind of an arch or cross, and then people drove their cars under them, which was a lovely and creative idea. Some from our community also attended the prayer service held at the Courthouse on Friday at noon.

Pastor Pat also attended part of the program at Cherry Glade Mennonite Church about the history of the Amish and Mennonite community here in Bittinger. One speaker, Leora Yaste, told that the "Forks" always was a real community when hard times hit a family or group; whether they are Lutherans, Mennonites, Amish, etc., they rally around them. The same thing happens now, especially during haymaking time. Neighbors gladly share an essential piece of equipment with their fellow farmers.

The last two weeks saw many fields being cleared of the last hay crop. This year's second cutting was not great, but it was far better than the few recent years when we had far too dry a summer to produce any second crop at all.

On Sunday, Sept. 16, the biggest event of the year for my branch of the Glotfelty cousins was the annual picnic, held at Ft. Frederick. According to a somewhat "rusty" memory of Aunt Helen Englar, she and June Beachy (a little girl raised by my great-grandfather and family after her mother died in the influenza epidemic in 1917) helped to organize the first picnic held at June and Alvin Beachy's farm on Negro Mountain. The first picnic was in 1947 and for several years afterwards was held there. In order to accommodate the cousins from my great aunts, Lucy and Nell, who moved downstate when they were married, the picnic was moved to Ft. Frederick between Hancock and Hagerstown about 1953, before I was born. My "big brother" Rodney and my cousin Mike Englar were just toddlers. Their mothers were afraid they would stagger into a nearby creek around our traditional pavilion. The rent for the pavilion then was $3. Now it is almost $50, but of course it is quite improved, with electric power and decent restrooms.

This year there were about 60 cousins and family on hand. One thing that never changes is that we have plenty of good food. Since not many members of the Walsh family from Salisbury were present, we did not have the usual steamed crabs. Mariam and Jack Walsh from Salisbury and Ocean City had a big gang of kids who, along with my siblings and family, regularly get together when we go to Ocean City. Among my grandfather's generation present were from the families of Kermit, Elwood, Mary, Lucy, and Orval. I think our family was the biggest in attendance, followed closely by Lucy's.

Rhea Hetrick from Salisbury, Pa., accompanied Aunt Helen, Courtney and me to the picnic. Also from the Bittinger area were Jim and Donna Glotfelty, Rodney and Marci Glotfelty and family, Carol and Kevin Bass and family, and Ruth DiPaolo. "Pappy" Dale absolutely refused to bow down to the pressure to attend due to the fact that he wanted his last day on his front porch before going back to Morgantown to his last visit for chemo.

When we departed Bittinger bright and early on Sunday morning it was very cool so I took two heavy sweaters. When we arrived back in Bittinger about 6 p.m. it was starting to get cool again after a pleasant sunny day at the fort. (I hope that I can get my fuel oil delivered soon.) It was a wonderful place to hold the picnic at Fort Frederick, a large stone fort that dates back from the French and Indian war and preRevolutionary War. I am not sure if all the kids visited the fort this year, as they have visited every year that they attend, but I know that some of the kids came out of the visitor center with small American flags that they proudly displayed.

The kids did take a lot of long hikes in the woods and to the railroad track along the C&O Canal. Instead of like in the old days when we always had a big softball game, the kids played badminton. When I was a kid I loved to get up early, load into the station wagon, and yes, we said, "When will we be there?" I remember once I saw a car on the now Rt. I-68 filled with some cousins from Salisbury, Pa. They were the Garlitz family, and I said, "Look, they are going to the same place as we are." I have not seen any of that family for a long time.

It was interesting that we did not get into any political issues or comments about the length of hair that used to be a big issue about the boys' hair length in my earlier years. The picnic is a valuable family tradition, in spite of the many missing faces. I was shocked to see that my beloved brown wood horse swing set was gone. But the beautiful fort is still standing, and I expect it will stand many more hundreds of years.

Today, one week after the disaster, I find a need to escape into the woods, but I can only drive my car on lonely side roads and look at the leaves and listen to the late summer/early fall sounds of the tiny wood creatures. It is hard to describe, as it is a soft and complex combination of murmurs, hums, chirps, and mostly just sounds like hundreds of frogs, toads, and insects whispering some secrets.

Autumn is arriving much too fast, and I am busy trying to collect some still alive leaves, flowers, etc., so I can have material to work on my nature art dolls. Someone I don't even know who is a pet groomer in Grantsville sent a whole bunch of blue jay feathers. Little Claire Diehlman and her dad, on her first hunting trip, bagged a Canada goose. Little Claire brought a dead butterfly for me.

It is amazing how many willing people contribute to my nature things for my dolls. Everyone, thank you! I hope all these kind people will come up to my one-woman show at the The Gallery in Oakland sometime between now and Christmas.

THE BIBLE AS VIEWED from the pew.

Most Americans are now praying. Isn't it late? When we read the Bible we find that God's judgment came after He had been patient with His people for years. He has been very patient with us for years. If you have fears for your safety, there is peace which is offered to you. It is a peace which humans cannot understand. Peace is offered to anyone who seeks it. While the price we pay is but a token for what we are offered, we could compare it to offering a penny in exchange for a million dollars. How so? Simply stated here is how it works: First, you recognize the fact that one day your physical life will end here on earth. What then? Well, your soul begins eternity either with Jesus in heaven, or you are forever without Him. Look at the Bible, the WORD, the only Book which is important for us to read. Read John 3:16 - read Romans 10:9 - read John 14:6 and you easily see that you must turn to Jesus for salvation. Once you accept Jesus as your LORD and Savior, you can then begin a life of knowing where you are going. You begin to live for Him and not yourself. Once our focus is on Jesus, and we repent, we start the journey toward heaven and we will find, without question, that our destiny is set. You will find peace. Won't you turn to Him today, while you can! Questions or comments? Email Hisway@iceweb.net

GCS Recognized For Blood Drive Participation

Garrett Container Systems (GCS) has been recognized by the American Red Cross, Greater Alleghenies Region office, for its outstanding support of biannual blood drives hosted by the Accident business. The four bloodmobiles sponsored so far by GCS, the last of which took place in late August, have resulted in a total of 79 units of donated blood.

"Participation of organizations like Garrett Container Systems will allow the American Red Cross Blood Services to continue to provide life-saving blood to all those in need," ARC donor recruiter Christopher Manges said.

GCS manager Jim Keselring encouraged all Accident-area citizens to take part in blood drives that take place at his business twice a year, and more frequently at local churches, fire halls, and community centers.

Passive Movement Class To Be Held At GC College

A "Transformational Passive Movement" class will be held at Garrett Community College on Saturday, Sept. 29, from 9 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. by the Continuing Education and Training Division.

This course is taught by a former Trager practitioner and introduces a manner of working with gentle passive movement. Focus is on establishing a pleasurable, attuned and receptive state of feeling, from which quality touch and movement naturally emerge in a setting of peace and support. The outcome is relaxation, renewal, and restoration of grace and ease of movement. Students should wear loose, comfortable clothing for this class.

This course is open to massage therapy students, the general public, and practicing massage therapists as continuing education. Massage therapists will earn six Category A Continuing Education CEUs, and must provide license or certification number at the time of registration. GCC is approved by the National Certification Board for Therapeutic Massage and Bodywork (NCBTMB) as a continuing education provider under Category A.

The cost for Garrett County residents is $97. There is an added differential for out-of-county and out-of-state residents. Maryland senior citizens age 60 or older pay a reduced fee. For additional information, persons may phone 301-387-3088, or stop in at the Continuing Education and Training Division office, McHenry campus, Room 300.

Festival Craft, Gift Sale Set At Dennett Rd.

The Official Autumn Glory Craft and Gift Sale, consolidated at one site this year, will be held at Dennett Road Elementary School, Oakland, Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 13-14. Local crafters will be joined by others from across Maryland and from neighboring Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Some will come from as far away as Illinois to take part in this traditional exhibit and sale.

A wide variety of items will be available throughout the school, including handcrafted wood furniture, candles, jewelry, quilts, floral arrangements, Christmas decorations, birdhouses, and more. Craft and gift displays will be set up in the entrance lobby and the cafeteria and gymnasium, plus the hallway that connects them. This year there will also be craft tables set up in front of the school along the walkway.

Patrons of the Craft and Gift Sale will be able to purchase refreshments offered by Hospice of Garrett County. The menu will include hot dogs, sloppy joes, soup, chips, and soft drinks.

The craft and gift sale will be open Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and on Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Farmers and Merchants Bank will sponsor this event, so there will be no admission charge for patrons.

The Autumn Glory Festival is presented by the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce. For more information, persons may call the chamber at 301-387-4386.

APPRECIATION DINNER HELD — The Goodwill Mennonite Home held an appreciation dinner recently for its volunteers who have spent many years visiting the residents and helping with various activities including crafts and sewing. The annual dinner honors volunteers with one, five, 10, 15, or 20 years of service. This year was the first time a volunteer was recognized for 25 years of service. Ella Maust received an engraved clock in appreciation of her service. Maust continues to spend one afternoon a week at the home, where she has assisted with many craft projects, including the making of an original Amish doll, which is sold at several locations in the area. She is the mother of 13 children, and has been assisted over the years by some of her 31 grandchildren, who also enjoy visiting the residents. Pictured, from the left, are Anthony Lehman, Goodwill Mennonite administrator; Maust; Idella Bender, director of activities; and Daniel Miller, board president.

GCC Adult Basic Ed. Program Earns Md. Award

The Adult Basic Education program at Garrett Community College has received an Outstanding Performance Award from the Literacy Works program of the Maryland State Department of Education. The award recognizes Garrett's ABE program for achieving the highest rate of learner progress last year. A plaque signifying the award was presented recently to Dean of Continuing Education Lowell Bender.

GCC Oakland Center director Pat Baer, who schedules the ABE classes and hires the teachers, stated that 181 students enrolled in the program last year and 106 received their diplomas. The ABE program's completion rate of 59 percent was the highest in the state of Maryland. Average completion rate for all the programs in the state was 41 percent. Baer credited the accomplishment to her staff, led by instructional specialist Jeanne Gilbert, who trains other instructors and teaches several classes.

"We are very pleased to receive this award," Baer stated. "This program has helped so many people here in our community. I've seen many lives turned around. It's amazing how many people I see out there who started here — teachers, in the school system, workers in offices, and businesses.

"We have nine classes meeting concurrently throughout Garrett County," she continued," and we rotate locations. Classes meet in community centers, schools, here at the armory, and even in the jail."

The ABE program of GCC accepts enrollment registration on a continuous basis. For further information, persons may contact Baer at 301-334-8304.

Constitution Week Proclaimed By Commissioners

The Garrett County Commissioners in their public meeting this week proclaimed September 16-22 as Constitution Week in recognition of the document's meaning and anniversary.

September 17 marks the 213th anniversary of the drafting of the United States Constitution by the Constitutional Convention.

Members of the Youghiogheny Glades Daughters of the American Republic (DAR) were presented the proclamation by the commissioners on Tuesday morning.

The proclamation, in part, reads "The Board of County Commissioners does hereby proclaim the week of September 16-22, 2001, as Constitution Week and ask our citizens to reaffirm the ideals of the Framers of the Constitution had in 1787 by vigilantly protecting the freedoms guaranteed to us through this guardian of our liberties, remembering that lost rights never be regained."

Commissioners Give Money For Museum Visits

The Garrett County Commissioners in their public meeting this week allocated an additional $1,000 to the Garrett County Historical Society. Five members of the society met with the commissioners to request emergency funding for their program that brings county fourth-grade students to the museum to learn about local history, in conjunction with their unit on local history at school.

Robert Boal, president of the society, explained to the commissioners that the program had been funded for the last two years by the Smith Family Foundation. Boal told the commissioners that he had filed the required paperwork to receive funding with the foundation back in April, as he has for the past two years. He stated that the society always received the funding check for the program in August. Last year the society received $1,000, and in 1999, $2,000.

However, according to Boal, this August the society received neither a check nor any explanation about the status of their request from the foundation since applying in April, despite numerous phone calls and letters to the foundation. The society only recently learned from a third party, who had also requested funding, that the Smith Foundation was not donating any monies this year.

Boal explained that since a representative from the foundation had encouraged the society to reapply for funding again and seemed impressed with the program, the society presumed that the money would again be available and did not allocate any money for the program from its own funds.

Boal said that if the commissioners were not able to

A FAMILIAR AUTUMN SIGHT around Garrett County are gaggles of Canada geese, many of which make their way here to Garrett County for the winter. The mountaintop season may seem severe to its human inhabitants, but not so much to these cold weather fowl. We're fairly certain they are also fans of soccer, since they fly over every game and practice session at least once. However, the rangers at New Germany State Park, who answered some of our questions about the birds, were not so sure about their affinity for the game. Photo by John McEwen

Private-Public Partnership Clears Acid-Laden Waters Of Cherry Creek

A unique public-private collaboration has resulted in vastly improved water quality in Cherry Creek and the adjacent waters of Deep Creek Lake. The installation of a Boxholm lime doser on Cherry Creek is abating the effects of acid mine drainage from an abandoned coal mine and making it possible for fish to repopulate the creek and the area where it flows into the lake.

The water treatment effort has pooled the efforts the Sprenger-Lang Foundation, the Rock Lodge Trust, and the Youghiogheny Chapter of Trout Unlimited, each a private non-profit organization, as well as the Maryland Department of the Environment's Water Management Administration and Bureau of Mines, and the Department of Natural Resources Fisheries Service.

The lime doser was manufactured by Sweden-based Environmental Dosers International, which has a factory in Clarksburg, W.Va. The Bureau of Mines served as a liaison between the manufacturer and the Sprenger-Lang Foundation, which purchased the doser and covered the cost of its installation by local builder Mike Savage under the supervision of the state agencies. The doser site was made available by the Rock Lodge Trust, a partnership of private landowners Jessie Harris of Washington, D.C., and Stewart Bloch of Charleston, W.Va., that owns the land. After the construction project was completed, the Sprenger-Lang Foundation donated the doser to the Bureau of

Blaze Destroys House In Yough Mountain Club

Sketchy information was received this morning at press time about the destruction of a two-story house by fire. The house was located along Buck Drive in Youghiogheny Mountain Club west of Oakland. Called to the scene were volunteers from the Oakland, Terra Alta, Friendsville, Deep Creek, and Deer Park fire departments, as well as the Southern Rescue Squad. There were no injuries reported, and fire units remained on the scene for approximately three hours.

More details about the incident will be reported in next week's issue.

A COLORFUL AUTUMN GLORY PRELUDE — In anticipation of the 34th annual Autumn Glory Festival, colorful buntings now decorate businesses throughout the area. This traditional harbinger of Garrett County's celebration of fall displays the gold field with an oak branch, and red, white, and blue banners sweeping outward. Autumn Glory buntings are available for purchase at Rudy's Clothing in Oakland. Scott Browning of Foodland Fresh in McHenry is shown adjusting one of several buntings adorning the building at Market Square.

BOE Outlines Its Improvement Program For FY 2003-2008

Board of Education superintendent Dr. Wendell Teets outlined his department's 2003 to 2008 Capital Improvement Program (CIP) for the Garrett County commissioners on Tuesday.

One of the first major projects to begin on the list of improvements is renovation of Route 40 Elementary School. Teets said that the project had been approved by the state and work on the school could begin as early as 2003. The total cost of the project is estimated to be about $4 million, which includes $138,000 for modular classrooms that will temporarily house students while construction work is done on the school.

The commissioners and superintendent reviewed improvement plans for Dennett Road and Kitzmiller elementary schools, as well. Commissioner Wendell Beitzel noted that though Kitzmiller was older and had never received any renovation work, it was not slated for replacement until 2007, whereas Dennett Road was scheduled for renovation work in 2006. Beitzel also asked if Kitzmiller could be renovated, rather than replaced.

Teets explained that Dennett Road was scheduled for improvement first basically because it services more students, and it had been on the waiting list for improvements longer than Kitzmiller.

Mike Sines, Board of Education maintenance director, acknowledged that Kitzmiller had never received any renovation work, only regular maintenance. He also said that because of Kitzmiller's unique two-story wooden construction, it would be more feasible to completely replace the facility, rather than doing any major renovations.

Teets also showed the commissioners the schematics for the new planetarium. He commented that even though the state has never

"Rescue Service Heroes" To Be Parade Marshal

An Autumn Glory Festival tradition will be changed this year, as no individual celebrity will lead the Grand Feature Parade as parade marshal. Instead, the honorary post of Grand Marshal has been awarded to a group of people — America's "Rescue Service Heroes."

"Representatives of the men and women of Garrett County who serve as firefighters, emergency medical technicians, Red Cross volunteers, military reservists, and law enforcement officers, who often put their lives on the line helping others, will be recognized this year with the parade's highest honor, our Grand Marshal," explained Ken Wishnick, president of the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce.

In all other respects, the Grand Feature Parade of the 34th annual festival,

Site Development Work Underway At ClosetMaid

Site development for the new 1 million-square-foot ClosetMaid facility in the Northern Garrett Industrial Park near Grantsville began this week.

"This is a big project for Garrett County," Commissioner Fred Holliday said, "and one that is important to the economic well being of Garrett County." It is projected that ClosetMaid will provide 750 new jobs over a five-year period.

The county awarded a contract to JA Goldizen of Bridgeport, W.Va., to do the site-preparation work for the new manufacturing and distribution facility for the Florida-based corporation. JA Goldizen was one of six firms that submitted bids for the work, according to the Garrett County commissioners' office.

The site development phase of the project will involve all work necessary to provide for a building pad, including mass grading, a stormwater management system, and soil and erosion controls on approximately 74 acres.

A construction worker at the site this morning said that he anticipates working on the development phase of the project for four to six months, including during the winter.

The Appalachian Regional Commission recently approved a grant for construction of an access road to the Northern Garrett County Industrial Park. Information about this grant can be found elsewhere in today's issue.

It is projected that ClosetMaid will begin construction next spring on the first phase of their building, which is approximately 200,000 square feet. The company tentatively plans to begin distribution functions in May 2002, with manufacturing operations starting in September 2002.

ARC Approves Access Road Grant For Park

The Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) recently approved a grant for $330,140 to the Garrett County Board of Commissioners to construct an access road in the Northern Garrett County Industrial Park in Grantsville, according to Sixth District Congressman Roscoe Bartlett.

The new road would provide access to the new manufacturing and distribution facility to be built by ClosetMaid, a division of Emerson Electronics. A local contribution of $144,860

Planning Office Is Recipient Of $168,000 Grant

Congressman Roscoe G. Bartlett (Md.-6) announced this week that the Appalachian Regional commission has approved a grant for $168,000 to the Maryland Office of Planning.

"I am pleased to announce that the ARC approved a $168,000 grant to provide technical assistance, program planning and development, monitoring, and evaluation for projects in Washington, Garrett, and Allegany counties," said Bartlett.

The primary mission of the Maryland Office of Planning is to partner with local leaders to assist Maryland Appalachian counties in becoming self-sustaining and viable. Maryland will use its Comprehensive Technical Assistance grant to create 10 mini-grants for planning, economic development, and growth management initiatives, with an emphasis on areas that address the "sensitive area" and the "economic comprehensive planning mandates" of the Maryland Planning Act of 1992 and the Smart Growth Act of 1997.

The total cost for the Maryland Consolidated Technical Assistance Grant is $340,500. In addition to the $168,000 ARC grant, the state of Maryland will provide $39,500 and the three Maryland Appalachian counties will provide $133,000 in matching funds.

A HEIGHTENED LEVEL OF SECURITY has been ordered by President Bush for all National Guard units throughout the country in response to the terrorist attack on the United States on September 11. As part of that order, Oakland's 121st Engineer Battalion has stationed its various pieces of equipment around the armory in Oakland. According to 1st Lt. Barbara Maher, public affairs officer for the Maryland National Guard, the order does not require additional guard members to remain at the armory. "We will continue with normal staffing of the armories, but will keep them at a heightened level of security until further notice," she said. All public/civilian uses of the armory are suspended during this time. When asked how long she anticipated the order would remain in effect, she said, "It could be days, it could be weeks, it could even be years. Further decisions will be based upon intelligence reports and the potential threats of additional acts of terrorism." The Oakland and Cumberland armories are under the leadership of Lt. Joseph Shaffer.

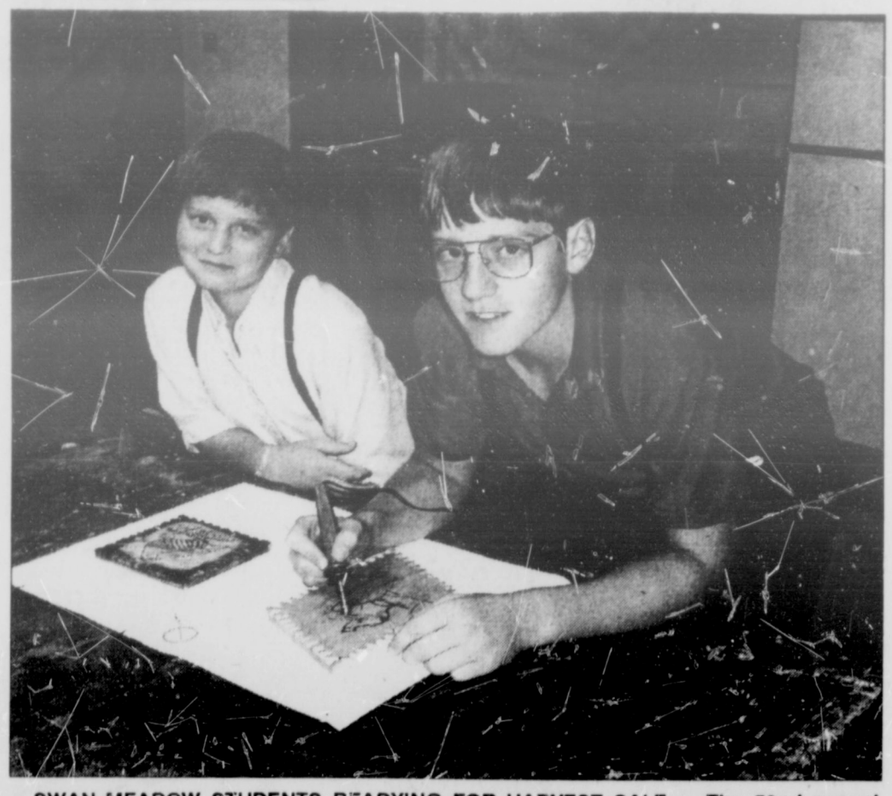
AG Antique Show Canceled By Civic Club; Raffle On

This year's Autumn Glory Festival Antique Show, an annual AG event and the major fund-raiser for the GFWC Civic Club of Oakland, has been canceled by its organizers because of a lack of available space in the Oakland area. "Due to the circumstances surrounding the recent [national] tragedy, military bases and National Guard installations, including the Oakland National Guard Armory, are in a lock-down mode," said a Civic Club spokesperson, adding that a number of other potential sites were investigated but deemed unsuitable because of the large space the show requires.

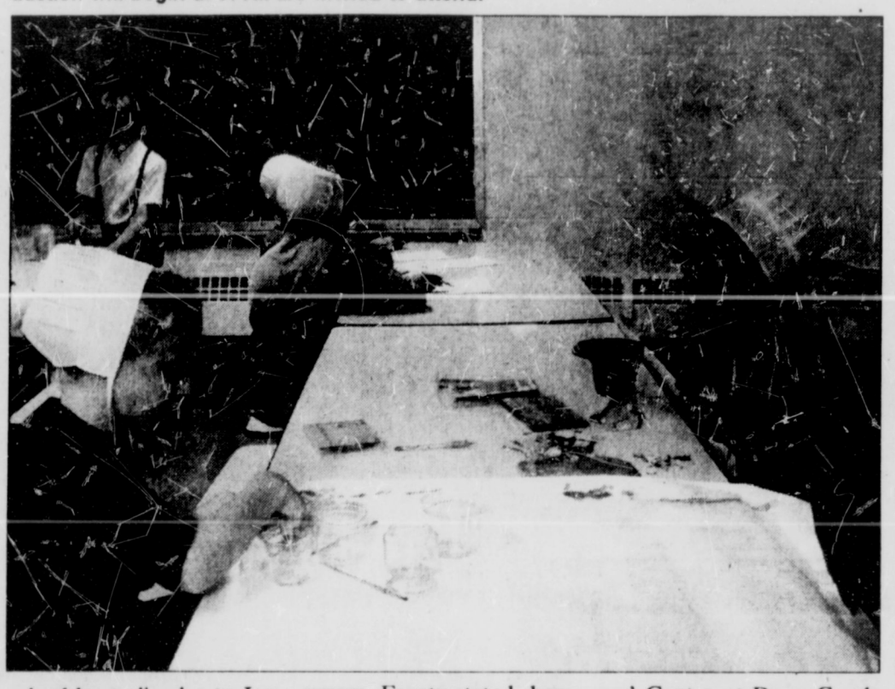
Despite the cancellation of the Antique Show, the Civic Club's quilt raffle fund-raiser will take place at the Pritts Building, located along Liberty Street across from the Oakland Train Station. The quilt will be displayed, and raffle tickets can be purchased at that location throughout the AG Festival, and the winning ticket will be drawn at the site the afternoon of Sunday, Oct. 14. Further details specifying the quilt raffle hours will be published as they become available.

The Civic Club will still be able to honor its commitment to make contributions to community organizations and charities this year as in the past, the spokesperson said. Representatives of organizations requesting donations should forward a letter to: GFWC Civic Club, P.O. Box 167, Oakland, MD 21550. Donation requests must be received by mail prior to Jan. 1, 2002.

The cancellation of this year's Antique Show is intended to be a one-time occurrence, as plans are already under way to resume the show for the 2002 Autumn Glory Festival.



SWAN MEADOW STUDENTS READYING FOR HARVEST SALE — The 52nd annual Swan Meadow School Harvest Sale at the Pleasant Valley Community Center will be held on Friday, Sept. 28, beginning at 7 p.m. Students are busy preparing items for sale at the event, including handmade cedar plaques, which two boys are working on in the photo above. Refreshments, including homemade doughnuts and cider, will go on sale at 6:30 p.m. The auction will begin at 7. All are invited to attend.



Garrett Co. Staff Leaders Provide Monthly Reports

The Garrett County commissioners hosted the regular monthly meeting of county staff leaders this week, hearing reports from 19 departments and agencies. Updates were heard on emergency management plans, county tourism, the Gypsy Moth Suppression Program, the Maryland Water Quality Act, the Meals-on-Wheels program, and the Washington County Mental Health Clinic.

Brad Frantz, emergency management director, reported to the commissioners that, despite reports to the contrary, his department was "not completely caught off guard" by the recent threat of terrorist attacks. He said that while the county does not have a specific plan to deal with an attack per se, there are multi-hazard plans already in place in the five-county response system that apply to any situation, such as those pertaining to response, medication, and recovery. Frantz stated, however, that some elements of the system did need clarified and improved upon at the local level.

Rodney Glotfelty, county health officer, added that his office was increasing its surveillance of diseases such as anthrax, botulism, and smallpox to monitor any bio-terrorism threat. The department could then administer vaccinations and implement quarantine procedures if needed. He said that the Health Department could also "marshall its resources" in the event of an attack by mobilizing the staff and utilizing local facilities, such as schools, to handle medical emergencies.

Glofelty indicated that the Health Department and Emergency Management would work together to develop a local plan to handle attacks within the next few months.

Ken Wishnick, president of the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce, reported to the commissioners that the recent terrorist attacks had not drastically affected tourism in the county. He said that while he did not have any "quantitative data" to confirm this, he was hearing "good, strong stories" about people requesting information about the county.

Wishnick stated that many tourists at the Visitors' Center at Deep Creek Lake said that they felt safe being in the county.

Jim Simms of the Extension Office reported that since gypsy moth activity had been "quiet" last year, his department would not conduct a survey of moth activity this year. He indicated that his department had, however, conducted a spot check of 200 places, and concluded that because the threat was "relatively low," it was not feasible to spend $4,000 conducting a survey. Simms said that the reduction of activity in the area was due, in part, to a fungus attacking the moths.

Simms also reported that his department would be conducting seminars in November on the Department of Agriculture's new Maryland Water Quality Act. Individuals who attend the seminar will receive a voucher that is good for three years. Individuals who plan to fertilize, chemically or organically, 10 or more acres of their land must have a voucher in order to be in compliance with the new act. The act also requires that those individuals keep all their fertilizer receipts and keep history sheets of the land fertilized.

Duane Yoder, president of Garrett County Community Action, reported that the Meals-on-Wheels program had lost its funding from the Philip Morris Corporation. For the past four years the program had been delivering meals five days a week to area senior citizens. Yoder said that without Philip Morris's funding, his agency would now only be able to deliver meals three days a week.

Fred Polce Jr. of Mountain Top Mental Health Associates reported that the Department of Health and Mental Hygiene had completed an audit of his department.

Polce also told the commissioners that the Washington County Mental Health Clinic had seen 32 students in three county schools so far this semester and 15 more referrals were waiting.

"Once complete," Bartlett said in a press release about the grant, "the new 1 million square foot facility is projected to provide 750 new jobs over a five-year period."

Doughnuts made by mothers of the students on the day of the sale will be available for purchase at 6:30 pm. Also for sale at 6:30 pm will be homemade caramels, taffy, patties, cookies, and fudge. Hot dogs, chili dogs, sloppy joes, tacos, and coffee will also be sold at that time.

Royal Reception Scheduled To Kick Off Autumn Glory Festivities

KRISTIN CALLAHAN

A reception "fit for a king" will kick off the 34th annual Autumn Glory Festival on Wednesday, Oct. 10, at Wisp McHenry House. Hosted by the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce, the evening will open with a cocktail hour. A buffet dinner will then follow, which will include an "endless" peeled-shrimp bar. The evening will then shift to the formal coronation ceremony with an entertainment program selected by King and Queen Autumn Glorious.

The Honorary Golden Ambassador for Autumn Glory 2001 will also be named during the ceremony by last year's winner, Elaine McDonald. All of the former winners of this recognition gather to make the final determination from a list of five finalists provided by the Chamber of Commerce. Their selection remains secret until the ceremony.

Audrey Shipe, last year's Autumn Glory queen, will return this year to participate in the coronation. The former queen will crown the 2001 royal court members: King, Guy Joseph, Southern High School; Queen, Bridget Frazee, Northern High School; Prince, Steven Kersten, NHS; and Princess, Jennifer Hickman, SHS.

Railey Realty Inc. is the official sponsor of the Royalty Court. Its sponsorship helps provide the custom-made gowns for the queen and princess and scholarships to all royal court members.

Following the coronation, a program will be provided by local performers, including vocalists Kristin Callahan, Miranda and Amanda Savage, and Holly Hare. Callahan, a 1999 graduate of Northern High School, has appeared in several local shows, and has given recitals while studying voice with Mary Mickle. She recently prepared a demonstration recording in her pursuit of a musical career. The Savage twins, students at Southern High School, have performed in Garrett County productions and talent competitions. Hare, an All-State vocalist, is a student at NHS and is a voice student of Kathryn Sincell-Corwell at Frostburg State University. Other items on the entertainment agenda for the kick-off reception have been billed as "royal surprises."

The coronation ceremony and program of entertainment is being coordinated by Fran Wishnick. The reception is co-chaired by Wendell Beitzel, Garrett County commissioner; Asa McCain, mayor of Oakland; and Karen Myers, secretary of the chamber's board of directors.

Tickets to the reception and coronation include Golden Ambassador passes, which provide reserved seating at the parade and free admission to the Lewis Family Concert/Banjo Competition and the Jay Amsworthy Concert/Official Maryland State Fiddle Championship, plus reserved seating at the Grand Feature Parade. Tickets, which may be purchased for $115 per person or $175 per couple, are available at the Visitors Center in McHenry or by calling 301-387-4386. Visa and MasterCard are accepted.

Two W.Va. Men Charged With DWI By Deputies

A West Virginia man was arrested and refused medical treatment after the 1980 Chevrolet he was operating drove off the road and struck a rock in the embankment on Route 50 near Alt House Hill Road, according to Garrett County sheriff's deputies.

Harold William Delaney Jr., 39, Eglon, W.Va., was arrested and charged with driving while intoxicated (DWI) and driving on a suspended license.

He was transported by Southern Rescue Squad to Garrett County Memorial Hospital, where he refused medical treatment.

Delaney was released from the Garrett County Detention Center after posting $2,500 bond.

Another West Virginia man was also arrested for DWI by sheriff's deputies.

William Nathaniel Dixon, 21, Terra Alta, W.Va., was stopped by deputies on Herrington Manor Road Wednesday night and was arrested and charged with DWI, failing to drive right of center, and failing to display his license on demand.

He was later released from jail.

Accident Man Badly Injured In ATV Mishap

A 19-year-old Accident man is listed in "serious but stable" condition at Baltimore's R. Adams Cowley Shock Trauma Center after he reportedly sustained a broken back in an all-terrain vehicle accident last Thursday evening, Sept. 20.

Ryan Shane Savage was operating a Yamaha 660R ATV in a field located south of Accident and adjacent to Aiken Miller Road, just under one-half mile north of Knox Drive, when he lost control of the vehicle at approximately 5:44 p.m., according to the Maryland State Police. Savage was reportedly jumping dirt mounds when the ATV overturned.

The Northern Garrett County Rescue Squad transported Savage to a Grantsville landing site, where MSP medevac helicopter Trooper 5 met the ambulance to fly Savage to Cumberland Memorial Hospital. From Cumberland, Savage was transported to the Shock Trauma Center.

Personnel from the Accident and Grantsville volunteer fire departments assisted at both incident scenes.

In other state police accident investigations, a Virginia man escaped serious injury when he lost control of his tractor-trailer rig along Interstate 68 and bounded across all traffic lanes in each direction late Tuesday night.

Anthony Dale Taylor, 48, Danville, was traveling eastbound between Keyser's Ridge and the Bittinger Road exit when his vehicle ran off the roadway to the right. Taylor reportedly overcorrected as he tried to bring the Kenilworth tractor under control, and his rig traveled back across both eastbound lanes, through the grass median, over the guardrail, and across all three westbound lane before striking an embankment, where the tractor caught fire.

Although the Northern Rescue Squad was summoned to the scene, along with the Grantsville VFD, Taylor refused medical treatment. No charges were filed by state police.

An Oakland man was injured in a single-vehicle ATV accident south of Oakland the afternoon of Tuesday, Sept. 11. Stuart G. Thayer Jr., 54, was operating a Honda 4-Trax in a field near his residence in the 3800 block of Underwood Road when the ATV overturned as he was negotiating a creek bed. The Southern Garrett County Rescue Squad transported Thayer to Garrett County Memorial Hospital, where he was treated and released. The Oakland Volunteer Fire Department assisted at the scene.

Narcotics Force Arrests McHenry Man After Search

A McHenry man faces several drug-related charges filed by the Garrett County Narcotics Task Force in the wake of a Saturday search of a Hoyes Run Road residence.

Dallas Webster House Jr., 56, was arrested after investigators armed with a search and seizure warrant reportedly recovered 10 suspected marijuana plants from property near the residence, and located inside the home a small quantity of suspected marijuana, suspected marijuana seeds, two handguns, and two long guns. He was charged with manufacturing marijuana, possession of marijuana, and possession of drug paraphernalia. Task Force detectives were assisted by uniformed troopers from the McHenry State Police barrack.

House was subsequently released from the Garrett County jail after he posted a $5,000 bond.

Persons who have information about drug activity in Garrett County can contact the Narcotics Task Force at 301-387-9566 or 301-895-5889. Anonymity is guaranteed.

Several other drug-related arrests were made by state police recently.

David Michael Anderson, 26, a part-time Garrett County resident, was arrested on drug charges after a McHenry area traffic stop on Friday, Sept. 14. Anderson, of Friendsville and Plantation, Fla., was stopped along Garrett Highway just south of Friendsville Road by troopers who reportedly detected the odor of an alcoholic beverage as they were speaking with him.

Anderson was asked to step out of the vehicle to perform a battery of field sobriety tests, and during a routine pat-down search undertaken for the officer's safety, a bag of suspected marijuana was discovered in his pocket. An ensuing vehicle search revealed a wooden smoking device containing suspected marijuana residue, and a quantity of rolling papers.

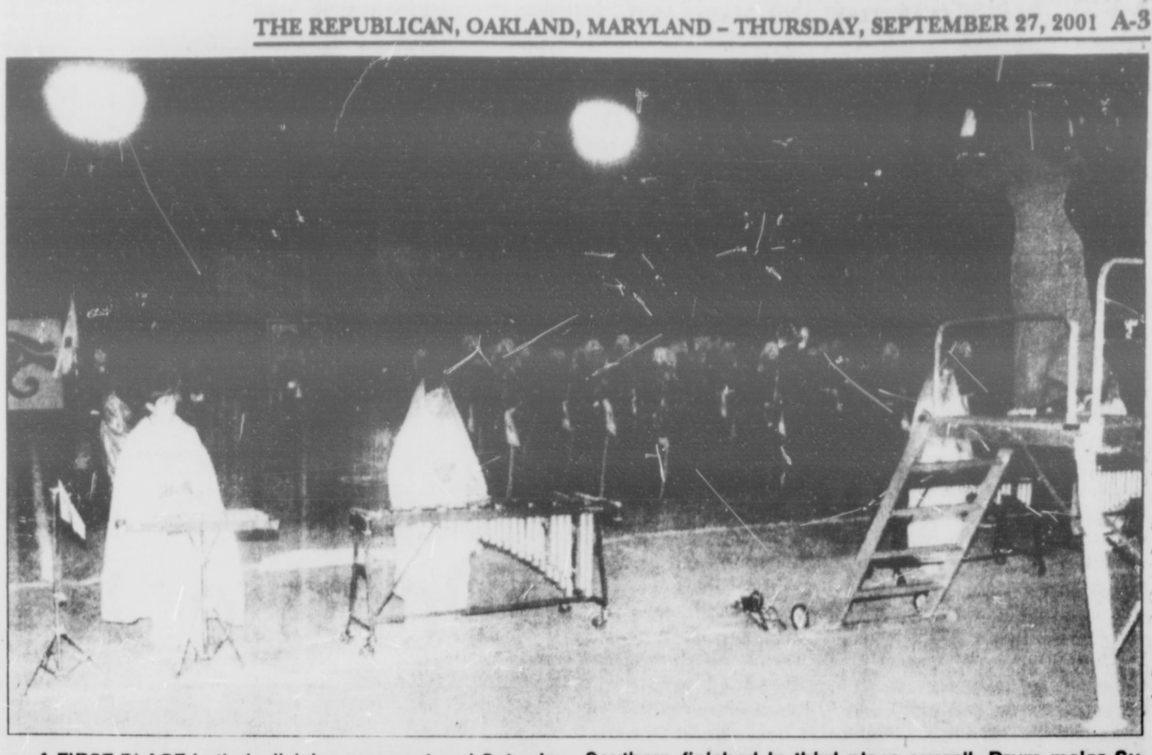
Charges of possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia were filed against Anderson, who was released under unspecified circumstances.

Xuan Sun Sayles, 24, Pittsburgh, was arrested on Monday, Sept. 10, after his vehicle was stopped for speeding along I-68 at Amish Road. After a computer check revealed that Sayles was driving on a suspended license, a vehicle search was initiated that uncovered a quantity of suspected marijuana. Sayles was charged with possession of marijuana and driving while suspended, and was subsequently released under unspecified circumstances.

An Athens, Ohio, man was arrested on charges including assault on a police officer during the course of a Sunday, Sept. 16 traffic stop.

Steven William Clay was stopped for speeding along Interstate 68 at Finzel Road shortly before 5 p.m. After Clay repeatedly refused to sign the citation the trooper attempted to place him under arrest, and Clay resisted, then struck, the police officer.

Clay was jailed for second degree assault, resisting arrest, speeding, and failure to sign a citation. He was released after he posted a $5,000 bond.



A FIRST PLACE in their division was captured Saturday evening by the members of the Southern Garrett Marching Band at the annual Music in the Mountains Invitational, sponsored and hosted by Preston High School in Kingwood, W.Va. Of the 12 bands in the entire competition, Southern finished in third place overall. Drum major Suzanne Gilbert, pictured above right, received the highest score among the 12 drum majors. The band will compete again this Saturday at Northern High School. See story for details.

Southern Band Wins Division, Third Overall

The Southern Garrett Marching Band presented its finest performance of the young field show season Saturday night in Preston High School's annual Music in the Mountains Invitational, held on the school's athletic field in Kingwood.

Under the direction of Richard Clever and Duane Salisbury, the Southern band earned a score of 76.45 to win the Group II division title. It was also the third highest score among the 12 bands in the overall competition, with Group IV competitor Wheeling Park High School finishing first overall with a score of 79.05.

Southern's drum major, Suzanne Gilbert, won the Best Drum Major specialty award for Group II, and also received the top score in the entire competition. Other specialty awards earned by the band were Best Color Guard and Best Percussion in Group II.

"Our kids performed very well," stated Clever. "They definitely upped their level of performance from the previous week, which is what we hope to do every week."

The next competition for the band will be this Saturday in the Northern High School band's annual Tournament of Bands Marching Spectacular, which will be held at Husky Stadium.

An Ominous Sign?...

There was a death, of sorts, at Deep Creek Lake this month, as one of Garrett County's — one of Maryland's — finest restaurants closed its doors forever. McClive's Restaurant, owned and operated by Doug and Becky McClive, was sold. It will be razed, and in its place will be new townhouses.

Businesses come and go all the time, but the loss of McClive's is not just the demise of another business. It should be seen as a red flag by our local elected officials and those responsible for economic development and the promotion of tourism. One of the lake's crown jewels, one of the area's major attractions, if you will, has been plucked out.

Among the promotional ideas of the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce is one the staff calls "travel by boat," and it is a feature that really sets Deep Creek Lake apart from most other recreational vacation areas. A visiting family can rent a boat and accommodations on the shore of the lake, and then spend the entire week enjoying themselves without ever getting into their car. With their boat, they not only can enjoy various water sports, but are also afforded access to several restaurants, to the movie theaters, grocery stores, the ice cream shop, and numerous other businesses and attractions along or near the shore. Obviously, their best choices of restaurants are now diminished by one. Is it an ominous sign of things to come?

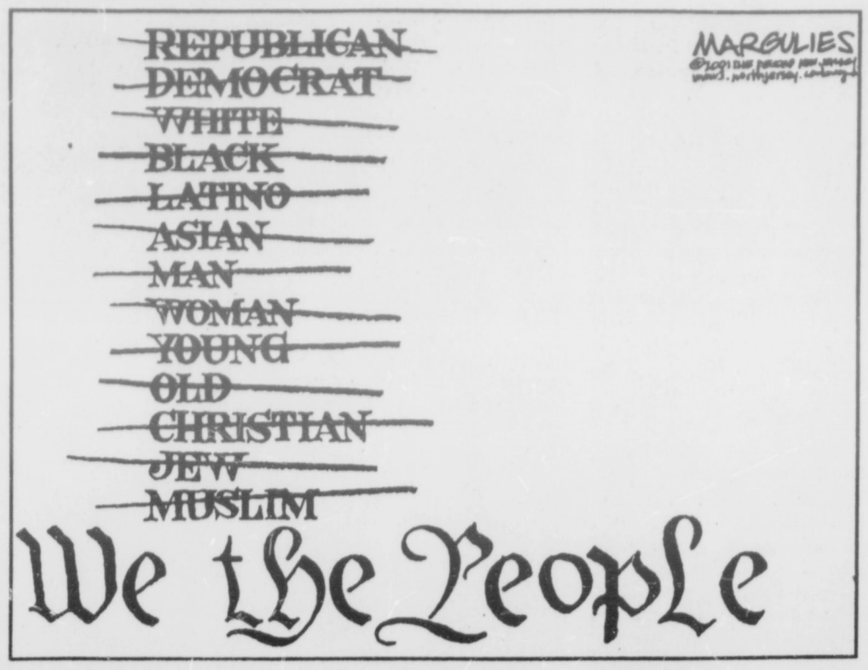
We want to stress that we are thrilled with many of the efforts of the aforementioned local officials, particularly those which resulted in the arrival of ClosetMaid. Dirt is being moved at that site near Grantsville as we write this column. At least 750 good-paying, sorely needed jobs will ultimately be provided by that facility. However, we believe there should be an equivalent effort to do everything possible to maintain our "golden goose" known as Deep Creek Lake, and everything else that makes Garrett County such an attractive place for visitors.

It's true that many jobs associated with tourism are seasonal and rather low-paying, and we must continue to work hard to provide employment with better salaries and benefits. But many summer jobs at the lake, for example, generate decent money for college students. More importantly, there is no question that the flow of outside money into this county, which affects the quality of life for all of us, is generated primarily through tourism. Not even the gross salaries of all the ClosetMaid employees will hold a candle to the amount of money generated for the county by tourism.

Thus, we must do all we can to protect this golden goose. We offer no particular solutions in this column today, but we would like to see more awareness of this potential problem and more attention paid to it by all of those responsible for economic development.

Note: We certainly don't criticize the McClive family for arriving at this decision, and we thank them for the many years of outstanding food and fun at their restaurant. It's a grueling line of work, and they have more than earned a break.

And finally, two corrections to last week's editorial: Timothy McVeigh was reared a Catholic, not a Protestant; and the federal building destroyed in Oklahoma was in Oklahoma City (duh) rather than Tulsa (momentary brain lapse).



Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

I think that the United States must go to war. We did not start this terrible thing that happened. We did not even have a warning. They just blew up the Trade Center and the Pentagon. We lost many lives.

My heart goes out to the families who lost loved ones.

Steve Pagenhardt
Oakland

To the Editor:

I am very upset with the acts of terrorism that happened in New York and Washington, D.C. The crash that happened near Pittsburgh was because of a few brave men who overtook the terrorists on the plane. I pray every night and day for those people who lost their lives, and their families. I especially pray for the firemen, the police officers, and the volunteers. I have never cried or prayed so much in my life.

To the schools that have the prayer vigils, I think you have started something good. Please keep it up. When I went to school we said a prayer and the pledge of allegiance every day. I know it has really helped the school children.

I have three grandchildren in school. One is in Southern Middle, and two are at Southern High. My grandson is a senior, and it has really helped him. Please keep up the good work.

Thank you,
A grateful grandmother

To the Editor:

I have read so many heartbreaking letters about the pets being killed on the road, poisoned, or being shot.

If you can't afford a fence, why not tie them to a clothesline, or put up a wire for them to run on? When doing this, always use a swivel so the chain will not tangle.

To the Editor,

As we strive for strength to work through the terrorism events of the past few weeks, it means a lot to hear words of support from our non-American friends. The following is an e-mail we want to share with you from a French friend of ours, Anne-Marie Gouhier from Bourges, France. Anne-Marie lived in Oakland for a year while doing a Fullbright exchange as a French teacher at Southern High School. Many of your readers knew her and will be as touched as we were by her concern and support.

Amy and Bob Rudy

Sept 14, 2001
Dear Bob and Amy,

I am still under the shock of the pictures we have seen live on television. How unspeakably horrifying!

We all feel concerned here, and I sincerely hope that none of your family or friends were involved in these tragic events.

All the countries of the European Union stand by the United States, and today has been declared a day of mourning for all the victims, the passengers of the planes, the workers of the WTC, the rescuers and firefighters, and their families. In addition to what our governments can do, at noon today in all the businesses, the shops, the schools, the offices, at the railroad stations, aboard the trains..., everybody in France, stopped their activities to observe three minutes of silence to express our sympathy and solidarity with American people.

We shall not tolerate the escalation of terrorism, hate, and blind violence.

God bless you.
God bless America.

Anne-Marie

To the Editor,

I first want to congratulate your son on his wonderfully written article. He has a talent for capturing emotions, and pictures, it appears! One thing that I love about your paper is that it prints mostly local/personal news. However, I was so pleased that your paper published this national (and, really, worldwide) tragedy. Thank you.

I was a bit disappointed, though, that The Republican failed to publish any pictures or articles about the tremendous job that our local National Guard unit is doing. There are military vehicles surrounding the Oakland Armory, as well as every other armory in most states. These male and female soldiers have been called to active duty to serve their armories in various capacities. They are protecting and guarding armories around our great nation under official orders from their governors or national government. These brave patriots are ready to be deployed, should the need arise, leaving their spouses, children, and civilian jobs behind. Our freedoms are being protected and ensured by these military individuals, and they should be congratulated, thanked, and praised.

Please consider this, and report something about our local soldiers, who are willing to make the ultimate sacrifice for you, and me, whether we praise them, pray for them, or ignore them! Let's not forget them.

Sincerely,
Darrell G. DeWitt Sr.

To the Editor:

I am a new resident of Garrett County. We were enticed to move here because of the beautiful scenery, laid-back lifestyle, and great employment opportunities.

I have been employed with the Carroll County Board of Education for 11 years, and I still am at the present time. During my employment, I have received outstanding yearly evaluations and letters of recommendations from my supervisors. I have been trying to get a full-time custodial position in the Garrett County public school system for the past two years and have been denied full-time employment. I feel I am being denied full-time employment and passed over for people with much less experience and qualifications. I know people are being hired without the qualifications and experience I acquired. Contrary to the article which was in The Republican on the week of 9/21, which said too many people outside the county were being hired, believe me, I know from experience this is not the case!

I will continue to apply at Garrett County schools, especially since this is where my new home is. I would really love to live here full-time instead of just weekends. I really love the beautiful scenery, my home, and the lifestyle. Now, how about a job!

Cordially,
Rose Runkles
Accident

To the Editor:

Not so long ago, the airline industry (backed by the Republicans) was screaming for government deregulation. They made the case that government regulations hurt both the companies and the passengers

If the articles in the papers were accurate, the airline industry started to run into financial difficulty earlier this year. This bad situation was made worse by the World Trade Center disaster in New York City.

Friday, Congress approved a $15 billion relief package for the airline industry.

Somehow this doesn't seem right. If the airline industry wanted the government to keep hands off before, why are they asking for what amounts to a government-funded corporate welfare program now?

As a result of the Republican brokered tax cut earlier this year, President Bush and Congress must now use Social Security (payroll) taxes to pay for this relief package.

Sometime in 2016, the Social Security Administration (SSA) will not collect enough in payroll taxes to cover all the benefits it has to pay out. To cover the financing gap, the SSA will begin redeeming an estimated $4.9 trillion worth of Treasury bonds that Social Security will have accumulated from surpluses it has been running since the 1980s. As the bonds are redeemed, Congress will be required to cover the costs by raising income and payroll taxes, cutting benefits, and/or borrowing money. By 2038, under the trustees' best guess, the bonds will be exhausted.

My hope is that by 2038, Congress and future presidents will find it in their hearts to provide Social Security with the necessary funding for those who are being asked to provide corporate welfare today.

Nikola (Nick) Drobac

To the Editor:

The tragedy of what happened to our country by terrorists is appalling. Now we as a country feel the need to respond. Justice must be served to those who have done this terrible unjustified killing of innocent people.

Can we also bring to justice the remaining terrorists in our country that disguise themselves as true Americans? In 1996 there were 17,126 deaths—I repeat, 17,126—due to people driving under the influence of alcohol. Twice as many people killed as in the attack on 9-11-01. They took the weapon of an automobile and smashed into innocent victims.

Where is the outcry? Why is there no moment of silence for these individuals, whose lives were snuffed out by this act of cowards? These people are killed one by one, as if in execution mode. America, wake up. There are many more people being killed year after year by drivers under the influence of alcohol. People on our own soil, killing Americans daily, and we as a society will not declare war on our own terrorists. We will allow this to happen again in 2001, 2002, 2003, 2004, and on and on. Try to name one other event, substance, or attack that takes more innocent lives than driving under the influence of alcohol. I know of none.

If you drink and drive, consider yourself an American terrorist. Please, don't drink and drive.

Sincerely,
Don Beitzel

To the Editor:

This is an emotional time for Americans, both nationally and personally.

I, on the one hand, am thankful that my cousin Tim is safe and well. Tim is a police officer in Manhattan and was in a training meeting on the morning of September 11.

On the other hand, I feel deep sadness. A woman I knew, Pat, perished at the Pentagon. She leaves behind her husband Dave and their two young sons.

So, as I give thanks for Tim's safety and pray for Pat, the other victims, their families, and our country, I keep in mind that in this necessary war against terrorism, at some time, in some other region of the world, more innocent people may die. And their families, friends, and communities will feel then the way I feel now.

To the Editor:

The last two weeks seem to be a blur of emotions. I am numb about the crisis in New York City, yet I rejoice in the solidarity of our country and its people. The accounts of Matt and the others, the dignified reverence that was displayed by the entire student body of Southern High School at the memorial service, the number of people who gave blood and collected money for the families of the fallen — these are only some of the things that uplift my heart and restore my faith in my countrymen and the human race.

For the past several days, I have been on the horns of a dilemma. Last year I decided to direct a musical titled A Sanders Family Christmas for November of this year at Our Town Theatre. The sequel to Smoke on the Mountain, one of OTT's most beloved productions, this is a play about a family of gospel singers at a Christmas Eve service in 1941. A poignant subplot of the script embraces the family's son who will leave for action in World War II the next day. Certainly, this is a timely, but sensitive, subject.

As artistic director of Our Town Theatre, it is my

by Mary Sincell McEwen

In the wake of what has happened to our country, I find it difficult to "be funny" in my writing, even though I think laughter is definitely good for the soul. I have heard David Letterman and other comedians say in the last two weeks that they don't feel like being funny. Things get pretty sticky when your life's work is about being funny. But we Americans must not let what has happened sober us forever. Yes, we should remain vigilant in our remembrance of what has befallen us, but we cannot let these extremists win by giving up our lives and constantly looking over our collective shoulder.

With that in mind, I now embark on the ongoing saga of the three little aliens posing as my sons. Really, sometimes I wonder. They are so cute and yet so exasperating. I think parenthood is somebody's idea of a practical joke — you love these imps more than anything on the planet, and yet they make your hair hurt from frustration. Just to give you an idea: Alex, nearly 7, has taken quite a liking to fool's gold. He searches every pile of gravel he happens upon, stuffing his pockets full of rocks. He then tosses the same pants down the laundry chute without a care. I sprain things picking up these rock-laden jeans. And next to my washer is a huge pile of gravel. Honestly, I think I could start my own quarry. And I might find a market for it: "Be the envy of the neighborhood. Have your own solid pyrite driveway." There are piles of it all over the house, even though the rule is "don't bring stuff inside that belongs outside, like sticks, rocks, snakes, beetles, rodents, large mammals, or nondescript loads of soil." But like many rules, this one is conveniently forgotten most of the time. Littering our home at the moment is an assortment of acorns, snake skins, the aforementioned rocks, dried up leaves that were really pretty three days ago, and empty chrysalises. Yes, it's often referred to, by my husband and me, as a "pig sty." I sometimes wonder if the boys just naturally refer to it as that when talking with their friends. "You wanna come over to our pig sty? We could sleep in our mess of a room."

Michael, nearly 6, is an affectionate, sweet boy who is the most stubborn child I've ever known. If he is relaying a story, you better just let him finish, no matter how long it takes, because if you interrupt him, he will simply start again from the beginning, patiently and doggedly, until he tells the entire saga. "Today in school," he starts with his deliberate, slow drawl, "we learned about Mr. T and he has tall, um, tall . . . " He may be then interrupted by the phone ringing or his brother tripping him for no reason. Pause. "Today in school," he starts again, "we learned about Mr. T. He has tall . . . tall . . ."

"TEETH!" Alex yells. "He has tall stupid teeth! Cheesh!"

"Oh, yeah, that's right," Michael says, smiling, unabashed by his brother's impatience. Short pause. Deep breath. "Hey, Mom, today in school, we learned about Mr. T . . . ." Gad.

And then there's our oldest, Robert, who is 9 and very interested in his appearance. He has always had a thing about his hair. Just ask our beautician, Kim Sanders. "What are we doing with Rob this time?" she asks me. He's had a buzz cut, a mohawk, and spikes. His most recent request, which I reluctantly agreed to, was to keep the spiky look, but to accentuate it with some blond dye. So now he has this swatch of hair on the top of his head that is very blond, and he insists that it be spiked most of the time. We can be running an hour late, but he comes flying into the bathroom, gel in hand — "Spike it, spike it, Mom! Please!" So I squirt a bunch of gel and brush his hair straight up, and by golly, it looks pretty cool. He especially wants it pointing skyward for his soccer games. I think it's that Goliath syndrome.

Even though summer is now certainly asleep, the boys are still playing outside every evening. We have to argue with them to wear jackets, and in Alex's case, to wear shoes. Because my husband has undertaken a steps-replacement project inside the house, there piles of old wood lying around, and the boys have a new building idea every day for those worn-out treads. A club house, an apartment for the cat (yeah, right), a rabbit pen, and so on. Michael had a brilliant notion the other day, eyeing some old windows stacked on the porch, which we're also replacing. He decided it would be cool to use the windows as the floor of a club house. So he lugged a storm window down and placed it on the ground, and then walked on it. Doh! "I didn't know it would break," he claimed later. "I told you it would break," Alex says. "I told him, Mom." And yet he let his little brother do it anyhow. "Well, I sort of wanted to see it break," he admits.

It's certainly an entertaining life, albeit exhausting. But what would John and I be doing if we didn't have these guys? I can't imagine it. And just as the sun kept rising and setting after the Sept. 11 attack, and the monarchs kept flying and the leaves kept changing, our boys have stayed the same — lovable, exasperating, precious beyond words — here with us now, relying on our hugs and encouraging words.

If you've never noticed, take a look around when the sky is cloudy and full of rain. Flowers, flags, and the autumn leaves seem all the more brilliant.

responsibility to decide which plays we will do and when they will be presented. I have studied the script intensively, and because it is a work that I feel celebrates who and what the American people are, I have decided to go ahead with it.

Auditions will be held this weekend: Friday, Sept. 28, 7-9 p.m.; Saturday, Sept. 29, 10 a.m.-noon, and Sunday, Sept. 30, 1-3 p.m. There are parts for four adults and three older teens, as well as non-speaking parts for a few musicians.

We at OTT encourage anyone who is interested to audition, assist us technically, or come to the performances. Our chief purpose as a community theatre is to serve our area in as many ways as we can, but primarily through the presentation of shows that will be meaningful. We look forward to working with you. Thank you for your support.

Sincerely yours,

To the Editor:

I applaud you commentary in last week's issue titled, "No Room For Prejudice." What an excellent point you made about Timothy McVeigh and his attack on the building in Oklahoma City, and how there have been no attacks on citizens of his kind. That fact had not occurred to me. Yet, after the bombing of Pearl Harbor, Japanese-Americans were treated very badly, and now the same thing is happening to anyone with connections to the Middle East.

Although I well know its meaning, I looked up the word "prejudice" in the dictionary. It indicates an "unreasonable bias, intolerance and irrational hatred of other races, creeds, religions, occupations, etc., injury or harm resulting as from some judgment or action of another or others." That sounds like what just happened to our country. Somebody doesn't approve of the way we live. They think their way is the only way, so we've been punished for being different from them.

In turn, when citizens of the United States begin attacking people of Middle Eastern persuasion, doesn't that make them like the terrorists? As the old cliché goes, two wrongs don't make a right.

I, too, am outraged that Jerry Falwell and Pat Robertson have been going around blaming this attack on this country's supposed immorality. People like them just bolster my humble opinion that fanaticism of any kind is a dangerous mindset for anyone to embrace. It causes an imbalance within and creates an inability to see or think clearly. I've always thought that it's best to treat people as individuals, to look beyond all the labels that can be applied to someone. It would be best to try to see the uniqueness of every single individual before making a judgment of them.

I don't think this attack on America was "God's will" either. I believe that it's God's will that we love one another as neighbors and treat each other like we'd like to be treated. It's so simple; why does it seem so hard?

Sincerely,
Paula Browning

To the Editor:

My wife and I would like to thank the citizens of Oakland for the compassion they showed for us on Tuesday, September 11, the new "Day of Infamy." We were vacationing in West Virginia, but had come into Oakland on a day trip when we realized that our younger son usually went into New York City on Tuesdays for a morning meeting, somewhere in the vicinity of the World Trade Center. Needless to say, we were very concerned for his safety.

Our first inclination was to page him, but not knowing whether he could return calls to a pay phone, we asked to use the phone at a local store. After explaining our problem, the clerk there graciously allowed us to make a call to our son's pager number. He did not return our call after some time so, not wishing to inconvenience the store, we went to Town Hall, where we again explained our dilemma. The staff's reaction was outstanding, considering we were total strangers. They allowed us to use their computers to try to locate some phone numbers where we might learn our son's situation. We were told not to worry about using our phone cards to make any necessary long-distance calls. We were even offered some of the lunch the employees had brought in.

Eventually, we contacted our other son and learned that his brother was safe. It turned out he was headed for the train station beneath the World Trade Center, and would have arrived shortly after the collapse of the building. Before that time, he knew about the attacks and was actually in a position in New Jersey where he could see the dust and smoke from the crashes.

We want to commend the individuals in your city who were so nice to a couple of worried strangers. You should all be proud of the actions of all the people with whom we came in contact. They reflect true "Southern hospitality."

We also know that some of your citizens might also have been "in harm's way" that same day. We pray that they all got through the day safely.

Thank you again for the many kindnesses we received.

Sincerely yours,
George and Alice Taylor
Harrisburg, Pa.

To the Editor:

It's Sunday, September 16, 2001. Just five days ago terrorists' flew hijacked airliners into the World Trade Center buildings in Manhattan, N.Y., and the Pentagon. I need not expound on the tragedy and motive for the attack, for there will be many written sources for this information. But I do feel a compulsion to express my personal thoughts and emotion for posterity's sake. There may come a day in future generations that one might wonder what thoughts ran through our minds as we awaited the unfolding, inevitable reality of such an attack on our freedom and liberty.

I will be 55 years old in two months. As a child, I grew up in the shadows of the World War II and Korean War generation veterans, and it was their parents who endured World War I and the Depression. It was quite natural for children of my generation to be fearful of the danger of another world war. Our grandparents and parents suffered and endured such hardships so that our generation could live their dream of prosperity and peace. Their generation thought of the power of one — of what they could do or needed to do personally. But something has changed in the following generations of relative peace and prosperity. There is no talk of what I must do, it is instead, what we must do.

I was a witness to this we symbolism as a 19-year-old Vietnam combat Marine. There was much talk in the early years of that war of what we need to do. And in later years what we need to do became "Hell no, we won't go." It's quite easy to posture and proclaim your patriotism, and exult our nation's need to react. In this case it's very clear that it must.

But, what I find interesting is how readily and aggressively those who will not and have not met the needs of defending this nation so loudly proclaim their patriotism through the expression of "We must do this or that." How easy it is for them to send their neighbor's children off to defend American democracy. And how easy it is for these people to glamorize, glorify, and romanticize war. There is only one outcome and purpose of war, that being killing and destroying, while hoping that your side is better at it than theirs.

I can't help but make the analogy of this situation to that of a sporting event — say, a national televised football game. There are two teams of players, and their only goal is that at the end of the game they are victorious. And then there are the fans of a particular team. Their reason or motivation for aligning themselves with one side or the other is as varied and personal as in war. When the camera pans the stadium, you will see on either side of the field spectators in the colors of the team that they support, and wearing clothing that is readily identified with that team. They proclaim that "We are number one." When their team is victorious, they feel as though they themselves had accomplished something, when in fact, they did nothing. The same is true in modern day war. People express outrage and demand the use of military force for just as many varied reasons. But how many of those people will go home from work in the evening, and sit in front of the television with a bowl of popcorn and a beverage to watch the events of the day's death and dying.

When their neighbor's sons and daughters come home broken physically and mentally, where will they be? If history and past behavior is to serve as a guide, for them the game is over and all they are concerned about is that their side won. They will have little if any concern for the needs of the combatants.

War is neither glorious, romantic, nor glamorous. It's death, dying, sacrifice and pain — physical, emotional and spiritual.

David L. McElheny

To the Editor:

I am writing this in a jet somewhere between Baltimore and Cleveland. Naturally I have reason to contemplate the recent events in America. I have a lot of opinions about how we should respond to these acts of terrorism, but most are well beyond my field of expertise. There is, however, one thing I know a little about. The discussions about good and evil concern me. I have a Bible and it isn't very difficult to read. The discussions I am hearing call the terrorists evil. That is accurate enough. Those same discussions refer to the United States as "good," and that is where they are mistaken — at least if the Bible means what it says. I am not smug enough to believe otherwise.

The Bible says that there is no one who is good — not one. According to the Bible all have sinned and fallen short of the glory of God. Only God is good. Everyone else is evil. Otherwise we do not need a Savior. Christ died in vain if people are good. God wasted the sacrifice of Christ if people like us really don't need saved from our sin.

We have been encouraged to pray for the families of the victims. That is good. We have been encouraged to pray for God to give us victory over our enemies, but we have failed to ask some important questions like, "What does God want?" "Why did a Sovereign God who controls all of man's affairs allow this attack?" Could this be a spiritual wake up call for America?

The editor evidently believes it has nothing to do with God. I question the wisdom and source of his certainty. I've got to wonder why a God we defy and rebel against should do anything for us as a country. How many unborn have we killed? Is it any less tragic because they can't pick up a cell phone and speak of their violent circumstances? Do we really think that the true God will respond to a people who act as if God never instructed us about how to handle our sexuality? Do we think God forgot what He said about greed, theft, pride, arrogance, rebellion, and lust, just because we forgot? How stupid do we think God is? Has He suddenly forgotten all the movies and text books in our country that defy Him because some terrorists committed an atrocity?

If we think that we are good, we have simply never believed the simple Word of God. The prayer we need most is an individual prayer of repentance. As individuals we need to cry out to God, confessing our sins. We need to see that it is we who are standing in the need of prayer. We need to see that our hearts have rebelled against the King of kings and Lord of lords, Jesus Christ. If we will do this and cling to Christ and what He did for us by taking our penalty onto Himself, He will save us individually. He promises that in His Word. And maybe He will find reason to protect our borders as He has for so many years. But there is no promise in the Bible that God will come to the rescue of a nation facing an external evil when that same nation has no concern about their own corporate and individual wickedness.

In closing, I wonder how the editor knows Jerry Falwell and Pat Robertson are "smug, self-righteous, self-proclaimed judges of humanity?" Is it because he has taken the time to get to know these individuals and discovered that the flaws mentioned motivate their actions? Or is it a prejudice that the editor has about anyone who reads God's Word and believes that when God says He hates sin, He truly does? If it is a prejudice, I suppose now I too have taken on the listed character flaws. As bad as I am, I am unaware of those particular flaws.

I too have a wish. I wish that people who speak for God would only focus on what He has said, and not what they feel He should have said, or would have said. But neither my wish nor the editor's is likely to be granted any time soon.

While typing this I just heard that a tornado hit Washington, D.C. But... no...this could have nothing to do with God....

Respectfully submitted,
Jon Zeigler
Oakland

Mr. Zeigler:

For the record, I also regularly read and study God's Word, and the God I know is one of mercy and compassion, not of vengeance.

So, no, I do not believe he decided Tuesday evening to "create" a tornado in order to kill those two young sisters in College Park, and thereby send us some kind of "message" about our behavior and sinfulness.

Editor

To the Editor:

This week Garrett Community College had a brief memorial service, and I was asked to speak. I was unprepared for the deep anguish the students were feeling and expressing. The president of the student government association who organized the service did an excellent job. After the service, a freshman asked me some very appropriate questions. Unknowingly, that freshman prompted me to write this letter.

I was a short-term missionary in Egypt from 1956 to 1959. "Short-term" meant three years at that time. I taught at the American College for Girls in Cairo, commonly called ACG and since re-named Ramsis College. Most of our students were Muslim, children of privilege, children whose fathers were Egyptian leaders, children whose mothers were married to Egyptian leaders. A few of our students were Palestinian refugees, people without a country; some of our students were from Lebanon and Saudi Arabia.

ACG was widely recognized as an outstanding school. Our church had opened the first school for girls in Egypt; ACG was opened considerably later. Teddy Roosevelt had been at the dedication ceremony for ACG. At the present time our graduates are often not only children and wives of leaders, but leaders themselves in Egypt, in America, and in other countries of the world.

In October 1956, England, France, and Israel bombed Egypt in a plan to seize the Suez Canal. Fortunately for the world, the United States refused to join them. After the first night making our boarding students feel safe in a bomb shelter, we American teachers were offered the opportunity to leave Egypt. The United States Marines were on their way to rescue us if necessary. Most of us opted to stay. After the next night, our mission board made the decision for us — we were to leave; the Egyptian government helped us as they could. Citizens of the invading countries were being permitted to leave, as well as Americans and others.

At the port in Alexandria, hotels were full. Twin beds were used for two people; my best friend at the time was a black American. Neither of us knew until the next morning that the rooms Americans were placed in had already been booked to French and English, who were then deprived of the rooms but permitted to remain in the lobby and dining room. (Neither did we know until the next morning that there had been some air raids during the night when everyone went down to the lobby.) We, along with citizens of the other countries, left on the USS Chilton without incident. Most of us short-termers returned as soon as our mission board permitted.

While in Egypt, I received letters from a friend asking me how many Muslims I had converted. Mail was being censored in that highly patriotic period of time, and it was illegal to introduce the subject of Christianity to Muslims. Questions could be answered, but a Christian could not introduce the subject. I had gone to Egypt knowing their law on the matter. The friend was from my home church, so she should have known better than to ask the question. She has since joined a church which considers itself conservative, and she is more comfortable in that atmosphere.

It is a great many years ago that one of the reporters for ACG's school magazine asked me in an interview why I had gone to Egypt. My answer was that I wanted to show Muslims that Christians could love them. And I did, and they loved me in return. I read the Quran to understand them because I respected them. I still think it was a good reason to be in a land mostly Muslim. I still think it would be good for Muslims to know that Christians can love them.

To the Editor:

As I walked out onto the college lawn for the commemorative service last Tuesday, the bells in the tower of the nearby church were pealing the notes of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" into the soft September sunlight. In front of me, students, faculty, staff members, and administrators stood in silence, waiting. The president of the Student Government Association introduced Dr. Steve Herman, who spoke briefly about the need to be strong, to go on with our lives, and to face the future without fear. The Reverend Donna Lee Shogren gave an inspirational message, and the public address system played the "Star Spangled Banner." There were hugs and a few tears. When it was over, a solemn group filed back into the college buildings.

In that moment, I felt

In Memory of Delbert Dale Cole who passed away one year
year ago on Sept. 16.

We thought of you with love today,
but that is nothing new.
We thought about you yesterday and the day before that too.
We think of you in silence;
We often speak your name.
We have great memories and your picture in a frame.
Your memory is our keepsake with which we'll never part.
God has you in his keeping.
We have you in our hearts.

sponsored by First United Bank & Trust, will hold with tradition, Wishnick said. Beginning at 1 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 13, over 100 parade entries will make their way along the crowded route in Oakland. Dozens of floats, scores of musical groups, drill teams, antique cars, and dignitaries will parade past anticipated thousands of spectators expected to line the streets.

"The crowd last year was estimated at 65,000 people for the parade, and we are expecting an even bigger turnout for the 34th annual festival," Wishnick noted.

Parade spectators are encouraged to come to Oakland early to enjoy the many other exhibits, performances, and activities of this fall celebration. Food vendors, open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., will offer a variety of foods to sample. "People Movers" of Garrett Transit Service will provide shuttle service throughout the downtown area from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. for $1 per ride or $3 for an all day pass.

Autumn Glory is presented by the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce. For more information, persons may call 301-387-4386.

Lockwood Greene Receives OSHA Safety Award

Lockwood Greene, an engineering firm based in South Carolina, has announced that J.A. Jones E&C, its construction arm, has been recognized as an OSHA Voluntary Protection Program (VPP) Star Award recipient for its Mt. Storm, W.Va., Flue Gas Desulfurization (Dominion Power) power project. This award is in recognition of the high safety standards throughout the project's duration. There are currently fewer than 25 active construction sites nationwide that have earned the federal OSHA VPP Star award.

"This award is reflective of total commitment and involvement from all the project team members," said Randy Ballard, project manager. Stan Elliott, OSHA's area director, will present the award to J.A. Jones E&C at a ceremonial luncheon to be held Saturday, Oct. 6. Area and state political dignitaries are expected to attend, as well as the entire project team and key corporate executives from J.A. Jones, Lockwood Greene, and Dominion Power.

"Randy and his project team began to pursue the VPP Star status about two years ago, and led the entire project team to totally commit to the process with the expectation that they would make it happen," said the corporate director of safety, Michael Cain. Once the VPP application was accepted, the project team was required to administer a safety program using industry best practices for a minimum of one year.

The project then faced a rigorous three-day site evaluation by an OSHA VPP evaluation team. "This evaluation included field inspections of all construction operations, a thorough review of safety-related documentation, and sufficient interviews of workers, management team members, and client representatives to verify compliance with the stringent VPP objectives," said Peter Brown, OSHA Region III VPP manager.

The company received notification of the award from John Henshaw, assistant secretary, U.S. Department of Labor, who stated, "Your designation as a VPP site is a testament to the sustained excellence in all areas of your safety and health management system."

The VPP program was developed in 1982 by OSHA to encourage a cooperative relationship between labor, management, and OSHA, and to recognize exemplary performance in safety and health program management. It is the highest form of recognition that the federal government can provide an employer for achieving safety excellence. Further detailed information on this program can be found at www.osha.gov, and then word search "VPP" for additional information.

Lockwood Greene is a global business partner for engineering and construction serving manufacturing, process, power, and institutional clients. Founded in 1832 with headquarters in Spartanburg, S.C., the company employs more than 3,000 professionals in nearly 40 offices worldwide. As an operating unit of J.A. Jones Inc., Lockwood Greene also provides the entire life cycle spectrum of services from project development through operations and maintenance services.

WVU Student Experiences Weightlessness

A West Virginia University engineering student from Terra Alta, W.Va., recently learned what it feels like to be in the state of weightlessness.

Austin Barnard was one of four WVU mechanical and aerospace engineering students who conducted experiments in zero-gravity aircraft Aug. 8-18, at NASA's Johnson Space Center in Houston.

"Weightlessness is an awesome experience," said Barnard, son of Ken and Debra Barnard. "It is something I will never forget. We are all motivated and looking forward to participating again."

He and his fellow WVU students performed experiments with a manganese chloride solution while aboard a KC135A, a remodeled 707 the National Aeronautics and Space Administration uses to train astronauts for weightlessness.

Manganese chloride is a pink crystalline solid that makes a pink solution when dissolved in water. The ability to control the compound in space could have far-reaching impacts, from restarting rocket engines without having to rely on heavy auxiliary thrusters to designing cooling systems without pumps for space shuttles and satellites.

The students stored the manganese chloride solution in a small glass wedge with a slit to release the compound, and on each side of the wedge placed long, narrow tubes, Barnard said. The students used a magnet to move the manganese chloride along one tube and compared their manipulations with the other tube, which was not influenced by the magnet.

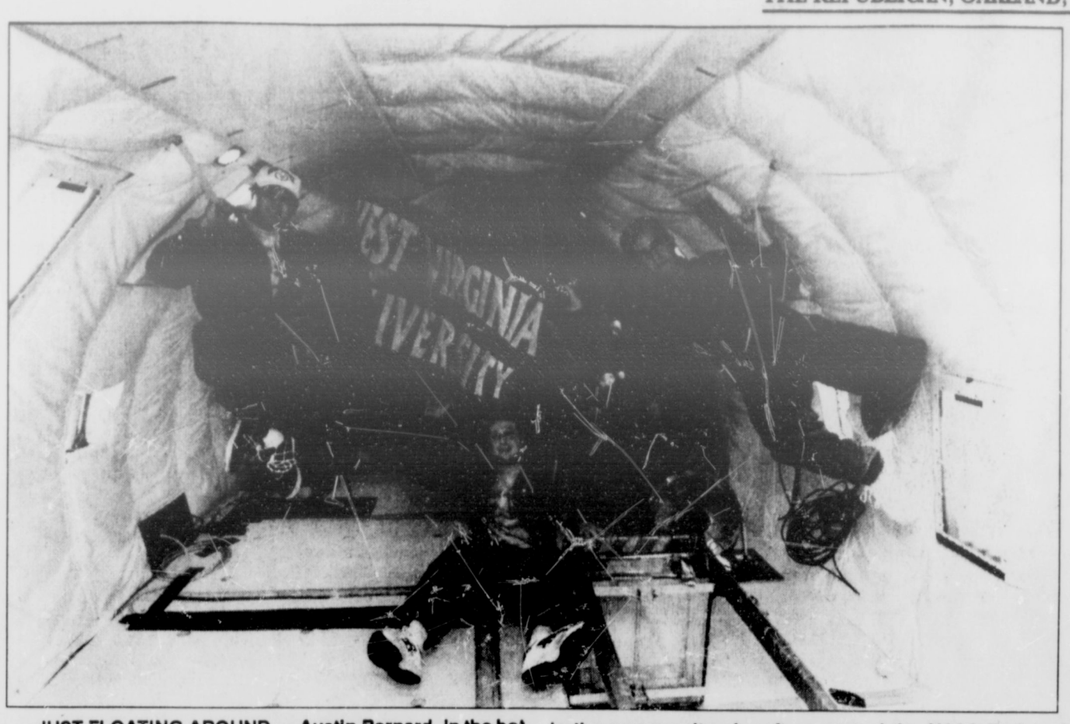
In preparation for the project, the students built much of their equipment and conducted mini-experiments in their Engineering Sciences Building lab, said mechanical and aerospace engineering professor John Kuhlman, one of the facility advisers on the project. They also developed computer models to help predict the experiment's outcomes.

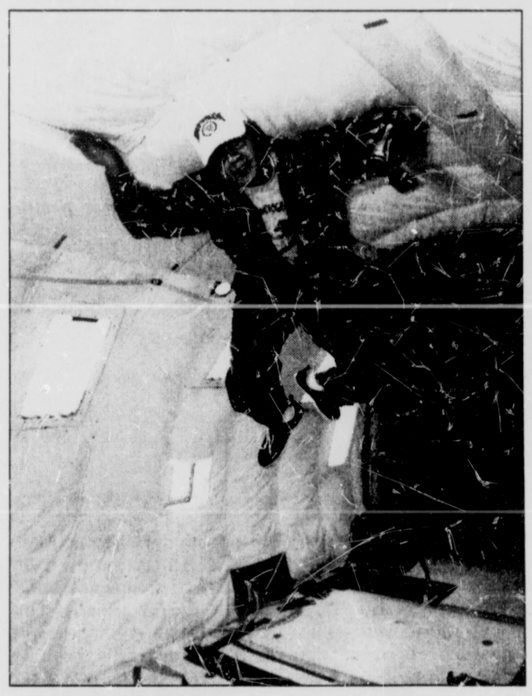
The project, part of the NASA Reduced Gravity Student Flight Opportunities Program, helped the students sharpen their technical skills and taught them organizational skills and teamwork, Dr. Kuhlman added.

Barnard is a senior who wants to design aircrafts and conduct research and development for either NASA or the military. He is attending the university on a WVU Presidential Scholarship and a Dana Grove Jr. Memorial Scholarship.

At WVU, he is a member of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics, and Mountain Top Muzzleloading Hunting Club. He graduated from Preston High School in 1998.

Besides Barnard, other WVU students who participated in the project were Jennifer Hazelton of Newell, W.Va., Matthew Lechliter of Ridgeley, W.Va., and Andrew Starn of Parkersburg, W.Va. Donald Gray, an associate professor of civil and environmental engineering, was the other faculty adviser.





JUST FLOATING AROUND — Austin Barnard, in the bottom photo, is a West Virginia University engineering student from Terra Alta, W.Va., who recently experienced the state of weightlessness at NASA's Johnson Space Center in Houston. He and other students conducted experiments in the zero-gravity aircraft as part of the NASA Reduced Gravity Student Flight Opportunities Program. In the top photo are Barnard on the left, Bob Paczuia in the middle, and Matthew Lechliter, from Parkersburg, W.Va., on the right.

We do not forget you father nor do we intend.
We think of you often and will to the end.
Gone and fogotten by some you may be,
But dear father, to our memory you ever will be.

The happy times we knew

Rams' Rally Vs. Grafton Dashed In Final Minutes

After trailing 10-0 going into the fourth quarter Friday night in Oakland, the Southern High School varsity football team rallied for 13 points to take a three-point lead over Grafton, only to allow the Golden Flashes to return a final kickoff nearly 80 yards to set up a final, game-winning touchdown. For the second time in three starts this season, the Rams lost their lead and the game in the waning moments of the fourth quarter.

After escaping with a one-point victory the previous week at Beall, the Rams played ineffectively in the first half against Grafton, both offensively and defensively. A one-yard touchdown run by Grafton quarterback Josh Trickett, followed by a successful conversion kick by Stewart Strauss, gave Grafton a 7-0 lead with 4:22 remaining in the first quarter.

Another Grafton drive ended with a 24-yard field goal by Strauss with 6:43 left in the second quarter, giving the Flashes a 10-0 advantage at halftime.

GRAFTON (16)
SOUTHERN (13)

Grafton	7	3	0	6	- 16
Southern	0	0	0	13	- 13

First Quarter

G - Josh Trickett 1 run (Stewart Strauss kick), 4:22.

Second Quarter

G - Strauss 24 field goal, 6:43.

Fourth Quarter

S - Tobi Stoner 58 pass to Chad Panther (Panther kick), 11:10.

S - Steven Skipper 17 run (kick failed), 3:39.

G - Trickett 16 run (kick failed), 3:19.

The Rams regrouped and slowly began to take control of the game in the second half, keeping Grafton out of the end zone and finally reaching paydirt in the fourth quarter when quarterback Tobi Stoner connected with wide receiver Chad Panther on a 58-yard touchdown pass. Panther then booted the extra point to cut Grafton's lead to 10-7.

After stopping the Flashes on their next possession, Stoner engineered a 95-yard drive that was capped by a 17-yard touchdown run through the center of the Grafton defense by Steve Skipper. The snap for the conversion kick was muffed, and the score remained 13-10 in favor of the Rams with 3:39 left in the game.

On the Rams' ensuing kickoff, Grafton's Chad Chambers dropped the ball at about the 12-yard line, and it rolled back to the 5-yard line. He scooped it up and found an opening down the right side of the field. He broke into the clear at about the 50-yard line and outran the entire Ram defense, except Panther, who chased him down and dropped him at the Southern 17-yard line. But on the second play from scrimmage, Trickett found an opening and raced 16-yards for what would be the winning touchdown with 3:19 left on the clock. The conversion kick by Strauss went wide to the right, leaving the score at 16-13.

The final opportunity for the Rams to rally again was dashed on the second play of their drive when Stoner's pass was picked off and the Flashes were able to run out the clock.

Skipper paced the Rams' rushing attack with 75 yards on 13 carries, while Stoner completed seven of 18 passes for 127 yards and one touchdown. Leading Grafton's ground attack was Trampus Efaw with 151 yards on 30 attempts, while Trickett picked up another 51 yards on 10 carries. The Rams finished with a 249-224 edge in total offense.

Spearheading the Ram defensive effort were Chad Panther, who had several touchdown-saving tackles, Brad Palmer, who was playing with an injured knee, Jay Tressler, and Joel Helbig.

The win was the first in four games for Grafton, which plays one of the more difficult schedules in West Virginia.

"We just did not execute well in the first half, on both sides of the ball," stated Ram coach Fred Gregg. "When you dig a hole for yourselves in the first half against a good team, you have to play a near-perfect second half in order to have a chance of winning. We executed so much better in the second half, particularly on our lines, and we got that near-perfect effort, with the only real exception being that 80-yard runback on the kickoff.

"We are not disheartened, but we are disappointed and a little frustrated right now," Gregg said. "With just one or two plays difference, we would be 3-0 right now. We are now working hard on learning to finish the game after getting the lead."

The task for the Rams will increase tremendously this Friday when they travel to Cumberland to face Allegany at Greenway Avenue Stadium. The Campers are undefeated (3-0) and are ranked among the top 20 teams, of all sizes, in the state of Maryland.

The Campers had little trouble disposing of Bishop Walsh, Frankfort, and Beall in their first three outings. Their wing-T offense is powered by their senior fullback, Chad Jacovino (5-9, 215), and senior quarterback Ryan Strother (5-11, 170), along with two speedy, senior halfbacks in Robbie O'Brien (5-6, 140) and Jeremy Sellers (6-1, 185). A favorite target for Strother in the passing game is senior end Derrick Jamison (6-1, 230), and the line is anchored by senior guard Bryan Hare (5-8, 220).

"They have run the wing-T forever, and they are running it very well this year with 20 seniors on the team," Gregg said. "Strother is a solid left-handed quarterback who stays cool and poised under pressure. Their line on both sides of the ball is very strong, and they have good team speed.

The Campers' 6-2 defense is likewise loaded with seniors, with Hare one of the more outstanding linemen, and Jacovino and senior Levi Lutz (5-11, 215) as the top linebackers.

"They are bigger and they are quicker than we are," Gregg said, "and our philosophy in every game is to try to maintain possession of the ball as much as possible, but we haven't been able to do that very well.

"Offensively, we will probably continue to throw the ball more, and we are going to need outstanding play from our line," he said.

The Rams received a number of bumps and bruises in the Grafton game, but with one glaring exception are generally healthy for this week. Brad Palmer, one of the team's leading tacklers, is listed as "doubtful" because of his knee injury.

Friday's kickoff is slated for 7:30 p.m.

SHS Jayvees Fall To Alco

The junior varsity football team of Southern High School was whipped by visiting Allegany, 38-12, last Thursday night, as Alco's Randy O'Brien scored three touchdowns and amassed 162 yards of rushing on just eight carries.

O'Brien's touchdowns came on scrimmage runs of 37 and 28 yards, plus a 46-yard punt return. He also successfully ran for a two-point conversion.

The Campers took a 24-0 lead with three second-quarter touchdowns and two-point conversions. The first two TDs were scored on one-yard carries, the first by Austin Scell and the second by Kevin Diubaldo. Two-point conversions were added by Diubaldo and Scell.

O'Brien then scored from 37 yards out to make it 24-0.

Mike Schmidl scored on a 29-yard run for the Rams, also in the second quarter, to cut the Camper lead to 24-6. After O'Brien's 28-yard touchdown run in the third quarter, Darwin Bennett scored for the Rams on a two-yard carry. O'Brien concluded the scoring with his punt return for a touchdown and conversion.

Diubaldo recorded 121 yards on 10 carries for the Campers.

Fumbles Plague Northern In 27-6 Loss At Berkeley Springs

Just as in the season's first two losses, mistakes continued to stymie Northern High School's varsity football squad during Friday night's 27-6 loss at Berkeley Springs, as the Huskies fumbled the ball away four times and gave up an interception to the host Indians. "It was another disappointing loss," NHS skipper Phil Carr said afterward. "Like the Mapletown game last week, we thought we could play with these guys, but we gave it away with our turnovers. Taking nothing away from Berkeley Springs, the key to the game was the good field position we handed them through our mistakes."

Friday's contest opened much like the Mapletown game, as Northern looked good early on. On the Indians' second possession, Husky defensive back Kellen Baumgardner hammered a BS receiver and knocked the ball loose, and linebacker Trey Brenneman scooped up the lose pigskin and reeled off a 39-yard return to put NHS on Berkeley Springs' 19-yard line. The Northern offense capitalized on the turnover when fullback Cheston Bachtel plunged into the endzone from one yard out at the 9:26 mark of the first stanza.

Northern's 6-0 lead held into the second quarter before Berkeley Springs mounted a long scoring drive that included a couple of big-play first down conversions on third and long.

NHS's defense stiffened in the trenches close to the goal line, and held the Indians until a fourth and goal situation resulted in a short touchdown play. The point-after kick put the hosts up 7-6.

On the Huskies' ensuing possession, on their very first play from scrimmage, a botched handoff exchange resulted in a fumble that gave BS the ball on NHS's 20. The mistake led to a two-yard Indian touchdown run at the 3:57 mark.

Only down by a 14-6 margin and still in the thick of the hunt, Northern committed another mistake on its very next possession that led to an Indian score. A botched exchange in the backfield resulted in a fumble that Berkeley Springs recovered on the NHS 23, and the Indians scored on fourth and goal on a one-yard plunge with less than a minute to go.

"That end-of-the-half score was a bit too much like our last game," Carr said in comparing that score, which put Northern behind 21-6, to a Mapletown punt return that gave the Maples a touchdown and a 21-7 lead with 45 seconds remaining in the first half of that contest. "In the locker room we told the guys they were still in it and only our own mistakes were killing us. If we could eliminate those and play like we knew how, we could have come back and made a battle out of it."

The Huskies stumbled again, however, and the Indians scored on a 10-yard touchdown run in the third quarter. NHS dodged another bullet with 50 seconds remaining in the stanza when Brenneman recovered a Berkeley Springs fumble on Northern's two-yard line, killing a possible BS scoring drive. A scoreless fourth quarter ended with the hosts still holding their 27-6 lead.

Brenneman was NHS's standout defensive player as he recovered two fumbles. Freshman Mike Wolf, brought up to the varsity unit for the contest, had two fine kickoff returns of 17 and 13 yards. Berkeley Springs running back Mike Swink gained 111 yards on 25 carries.

Northern will try to get into the win column tomorrow night during its homecoming game against Turkeyfoot. The 2-2 Rams started off by winning their first two outings, but have lost their last pair, including last week's defeat at the hands of Westmar.

"Turkeyfoot is usually our hardest-hitting game of the year because there's such a rivalry between the two schools," said Carr. "They're less than 30 minutes away from us, which is closer than Southern, and a lot of the kids know each other real well.'

The Rams are improved over past years, and have gone to more of an air attack with senior quarterback Chance Hinzey (5-9, 140), who can be expected to throw the ball 20-25 times per contest. A fine passer and good runner, the double-threat QB will have to be contained in the pocket by Northern's defensive ends. "We had good containment against Berkeley Springs, but their receivers made some great catches that foiled our DE's work," observed Carr. "I expect we'll be able to contain Hinzey."

A familiar name holds down the fullback position for Turkeyfoot, as senior Herschel Rugg (6-0, 170) is a younger brother of former NHS standout Marcus Rugg. The Ram runner is a bruising inside runner who will test the interior of the Husky line. Junior wide receiver Jared Nicholson Jr. (5-9, 170) is Hinzey's favorite target. Turkeyfoot's top defender, along with blitzing middle linebacker Rugg, is outside linebacker Seth Livengood (6-2, 215). The sophomore is starting at the varsity level for the second straight year, and is the Rams' biggest player size-wise.

"We need to right the ship," Coach Carr stated. "One win could turn things around for us. We've been working hard on the basics, and know we have to be strong up front on the line. If we don't make mistakes, we'll be fine, and it would be great to give the homecoming crowd a victory."

Tomorrow night's kickoff is slated for 7:30 p.m. at the Cove.

Maddawgs Just Miss Sweep Of Warm Springs

The Northern Maddawgs A&B football team took on the 5-0 Warm Springs Wolves in a Saturday at Berkeley Springs, W.Va., but time ran out on the Garrett County players in the fourth quarter as they fell in a hard-fought 34-31 dogfight. The Maddawg C squad hammered its Wolves counterpart by a 40-margin, upping its record to 4-2.

The Maddawgs B team struck first in the opening quarter of its contest as Josh Duckworth capped an opening drive with a rushing touchdown. The Wolves answered with a touchdown and an extra point. A Maddawgs fumble allowed Warm Springs to score another seven points, but Duckworth broke free for a 50-yard touchdown run that brought the Maddawgs to within two points, 14-12.

The A team stumbled early in the second quarter when the Wolves scored another touchdown. Maddawg safety Eric Espada stepped forward to redeem the unit with a 20-yard interception return for a touchdown. Warm Springs rallied for a touchdown and took a 27-18 lead into the halftime locker room.

The Maddawgs B squad scored early in the third quarter when Duckworth reeled off a 43-yard touchdown run. The extra point made it a 27-25 game. Maddawg defender Nick Graham recovered a Wolves fumble, but Northern missed the opportunity and was forced to punt. The Wolves scored again to take a 34-25 lead.

The fourth quarter was a defensive battle until the Maddawgs' Blair Silbaugh rushed for a 55 yard touchdown run. The Maddawgs defense held strong but was forced to use all its time outs to keep the Wolves from running out the clock. With less than two minutes to play and deep in its own territory, Northern's offense struck when quarterback Garrett Gulledge completed a pass to Blair Silbaugh that moved the ball across midfield. Forced into a hurry-up offense, Northern gave up an interception and the game ended with Warm Springs on top 34-31. The loss dropped the Maddawgs A&B team to a 3-3 record.

The Maddawgs C team dominated Warm Springs as wasted no time embarking on its 40-point victory. Northern's offensive line opened a hole that keyed Alex Baker for a 55 yard touchdown run on the first play from scrimmage. Kameron Kamp added the extra point. Kamp carried the ball 11 yards for a score on the Maddawgs' next possession, and Austin Tombley added the extra point. Baker then reeled off a 28-yard touchdown run, and Kamp capped the first half scoring by rumbling 27 yards for a touchdown. Northern took a 26-0 lead into the halftime locker room.

Despite some backfield changes, the Maddawgs continued their domination through the second half. Josh Mason scored on a two-yard touchdown, followed by a Matthew Grady extra point. Quarterback Adam Finzel scampered 36 yards for touchdown, followed by Kyle Rosenberger's extra point, Northern's 40th of the day.

The Maddawgs C team defense dominated the Wolves, allowing just one first down. Key to the stonewalling effort was the middle of the Northern defensive line, as well as defensive ends that effectively shut down the corners. At an unspecified time, defensive backfield member Christopher Murdock intercepted a second half Warm Springs pass.

The Maddawgs will host the GFC Reds this Saturday at Northern High School.

Unbeaten NHS JVs Roll Over Spartans, 38-0

Northern High School's junior varsity football program has run out to a 3-0 start on the season, with the most recent victory coming Monday night in a 38-0 romp over visiting Bishop Walsh. The win showcased the Huskies' balanced team effort, as Northern's offense accounted for four touchdowns and the defense tallied two scores of its own.

Freshman halfback Mike Wolf opened the scoring with a 15-yard touchdown run. Sophomore Corey Fike scored the next touchdown on a two-yard plunge from his fullback position, and an Eric Garlitz point-after kick put NHS up 13-0. Freshman linebacker Ian Wooden got into the act by picking off a BW pass and rumbling 60 yards for a touchdown, and Garlitz's kick put the Huskies up by 20.

Northern struck again when freshman split end Rico Alston hauled in a four-yard scoring pass from freshman quarterback Robert Stark, then, just before the first half ended, linebacker Wolf intercepted a Spartan pass and scampered 35 yards for a touchdown. Garlitz's point-after kick put NHS up 32-0. The Huskies' final score came when sophomore fullback Derek Workman turned on the jets to reel off a 50-yard touchdown run.

The unbeaten Husky JV, coached by 1997 NHS graduate Cody Brenneman and varsity coaches Phil Carr, Jon Houser, Joe McKenzie, and Frank Ewing, travels to Beall Monday evening for a 7 p.m. battle.

Rams Crush Keyser Before Falling To Alco And Beall

A win and two Western Maryland Interscholastic League defeats over the past week have evened the season record of the Southern High School boys' varsity soccer team at 3-3, as the Rams crushed host Keyser last Tuesday, 7-1, but then dropped straight matches to Allegany, 4-1, on Saturday at Greenway Avenue Stadium in Cumberland and to visiting Beall on Tuesday, 2-1.

Don Parsons had a hat trick and two assists for the Rams against the Keyser Golden Tornados, while Adam Miller recorded a pair of goals and Sean Buckle and Dan Cathell each scored one. Bryan Schwalm assisted Parsons on all three of his goals.

Parsons' first score came at the 16:09 mark of the first quarter off an assist by Schwalm.

He doubled the Rams' total with 11:11 remaining in the second quarter, again off a feed by Schwalm.

Keyser made it 2-1 when Cole Fazenbaker put a ball into the net off an assist by Adam Pritts with 7:20 left before halftime.

The third and fourth quarters were all Southern's, with Buckle getting his goal less than a minute into the third stanza off an assist by Parsons. Miller then recorded the first of his two goals less than two minutes later (17:16) off an assist by Tray Rives to make it 4-1.

Parsons completed his three-goal night with 17:31 to play in the final quarter when he put the ball into the net off another assist by Schwalm. Miller scored just 26 seconds later off a feed by David Glotfelty, and Cathell made it 7-1 with a goal off an assist by Parsons with 11:42 remaining.

Southern keeper Chris Menker was credited with three saves, while Keyser's Daniel Seldomridge turned away six shots by the Rams.

The Rams were dominated by Allegany on Saturday, as the Campers finished with a 19-8 advantage in shots on goal and held the Rams scoreless until inside the final minute to play.

T.J. McCullough scored two goals, both off assists by Pat Martin, in the first half to put the Campers up 2-0 at halftime.

A.J. Knotts made it 3-0 with a goal off a feed by Aaron MacGray with 26:20 remaining in the match, and then MacGray scored on a penalty kick about three minutes later.

The Rams avoided a shutout when Tray Rives scored an unassisted goal with just 30 seconds left in the match.

Southern trailed in corner kicks by a 3-2 edge. Menker was credited with 14 saves, while Alco's Shane McDade stopped four shots by the Rams.

It was the third win in five starts for the Campers, with their other two matches ending in ties.

The junior varsity match ended in a scoreless tie.

The Ram varsity played well against undefeated Beall on Tuesday night, a team that had allowed only one goal in its first four starts.

The Mountaineers took a 1-0 lead at the 31:00 mark of the first half when Greg Russ scored off an assist by Steve Growden. The rest of the first half was all defense, with neither team able to get many shots on goal.

Growden doubled Beall's lead with an unassisted goal about 10 minutes into the second half.

The Rams cut the lead in half with only about a minute to play when Parsons scored off a feed by Schwalm, but it was too little, too late.

The Mountaineers finished with a 14-10 edge in shots on goal, and each team had three corner kicks. Menker had three saves in goal for Southern, and Matt Bennett was credited with five saves for Beall.

The win upped Beall's overall mark to 5-0, and 3-0 in WMIL competition.

The Southern junior varsity was defeated in the preliminary match, 6-2.

The Rams will play again this evening at home against Fort Hill, with the jayvee contest slated to kick off at 6 p.m. and the varsity at 7:30. They will travel to Bishop Walsh next Tuesday for an afternoon match that is set to begin at 3:15, and then entertain Northern next Thursday.

HUSKIES PERFECT FOR WEEK, SEASON — Northern High School's varsity volleyball squad reeled off a pair of 3-0 sweeps this week over Bishop Walsh Monday and Beall last night to preserve their perfect season so far. Last night's match with the Mounties delighted the Igloo crowd, and among the many Northern standouts were senior Jolene Brenneman (#6), shown above completing a return at the net while, from the left, teammates Molly Wolf (#22), Amanda Frantz (20), and Heather Lander (#4) follow from the background, along with an unidentified ball girl in Husky garb. The photo at the right shows Christie Flockhart (#3) going high for a successful spike, with Nicole Sisler (#8) in the background. The unbeaten varsity Huskies, and their undefeated junior varsity counterparts, take on always-tough Fort Hill Monday in Cumberland.

Husky Booters Drop Matches To Mountaineers, Wildcats

The boys' varsity soccer team of Northern High School dropped a pair of Western Maryland Interscholastic League matches this past week, which dropped the Huskies' overall record to 1-4 and their WMIL mark to 1-2. They were topped by visiting Beall last Thursday, 4-1, and lost to host Westmar on Tuesday, 4-2.

A goal by Torrey Poholsky off an assist by Eric Durst at the 31:40 mark of the first half gave the Huskies a 1-0 lead over the Beall Mountaineers last Thursday, but the rest of the scoring for the evening was all by the visitors.

Greg Russ knotted the score at 1-1 when he scored off an assist by Steve Growden with 22:30 remaining in the first half. Growden then scored unassisted 2½ minutes later to put the Mountaineers on top for good.

Adam Bowling made it 3-1 with a goal off a feed by Joel Greig with 17:20 left before halftime.

The Northern defensive unit played much better in the second half and allowed only one goal, which was recorded by Brady Engle off an assist by Greig with 12:25 remaining in the match.

Beall finished with a lopsided 26-10 advantage in shots on goal, with Greg Bender stopping 15 shots in goal for the Huskies. Matt Bennett recorded seven saves for the Mountaineers, who finished with a 3-2 edge in corner kicks.

The win upped Beall to 4-0 overall and 2-0 in the WMIL. Poholsky's goal was the first given up this season by the Mountaineers.

The Huskies also held a 1-0 lead in Tuesday's match with Westmar, also on a goal by Poholsky, who scored off an assist by Shawn Fike with 21:09 remaining in the first half. That lead stood until the 35:46 mark of the second half, when Westmar's Tyler Schramm scored off a feed by Johnny Shockey.

Derek Moore put the Wildcats up 2-1 about three minutes later with a goal off an assist by Schramm, but the Huskies rallied to tie it at 2-2 when Poholsky scored again, this time off an assist by Guy Beitzel, with 15:38 remaining in the match.

The Wildcats responded with a goal off a penalty kick by Amel Morris at the 11:14 mark, and then put an insurance goal on the board with 5:44 left when Aaron Shockey scored off an assist by Derek Moore.

The win by Westmar avenged an earlier 6-0 defeat by the Huskies.

The Wildcats led in shots on goal by a commanding 31-14 margin, while the Huskies had a 3-2 edge in corner kicks. Bender was credited with 17 saves for the Huskies, while Brandon Kimble stopped 10 shots for Westmar.

Husky Netters Crush Spartans, Beall; 6-0 Mark Tops In Area

Hard practices and dedication to teamwork have paid off for the Northern High School varsity volleyball team, which stands at the summit of the western Maryland high school nets with the area's lone perfect record. The 6-0 varsity Huskies were perfect this week in 3-0 homecourt sweeps over Bishop Walsh Monday and Beall last night.

The Spartans were no match for Northern in the week's first outing, as the Huskies raced through the contest with 15-2, 15-8, and 15-4 wins. Senior Jolene Brenneman paced NHS with nine points, and junior Tabitha Beitzel added six points and three aces while classmate Amanda Frantz had four kills and two aces. Megan Raymond's five points and one ace led BW.

Not to be outdone, Northern's jayvee unit took its match 15-3, 15-5. Sophomore Lauren Wiley recorded seven points and two aces and Tiffany Swiger had seven points as well.

Northern's varsity took last night's match with similar ease by downing Beall, one of the Huskies' top rivals in the area. NHS's three-game sweep came on scores of 15-8, 15-12, and 15-6.

Junior Heather Lander led the Huskies with 10 service points while senior Christie Flockhart added eight points and an ace. Lori Blank paced the Mounties with 13 attacks and five points, and Angie Johnson had 10 attacks and eight points.

NHS's jayvees continued their unbeaten string by besting Beall 15-4, 15-0. Northern sophomore Kristi Garlitz tallied 11 points and two aces, and Swiger had 10 points.

The unbeaten Huskies face another tough squad Monday night when they travel to Fort Hill to take on the 4-1 Sentinels. Westmar visits the NHS Igloo Wednesday for a 6 p.m. JV contest and a 7 p.m. varsity battle.

Garrett Netters Drop Three For Week; Now 1-8

The slump continued this week for Garrett Community College's volleyball team, as the Lakers fell to Frederick Community College, the Community College of Beaver County (Pa.), and Potomac State College. The action leaves GCC still in search of its bearings with a 1-8 record.

Garrett took last Thursday's Sept. 20 opening contest against Frederick

Herrington Manor State Park Hosts Adventure Race

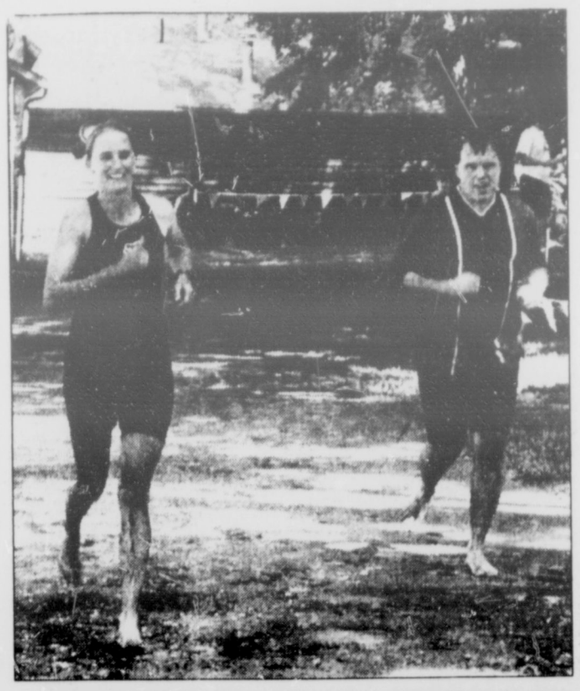
The first Deep Creek Adventure Race took place at Herrington Manor State Park recently, as over 140 participants competed in the multi-skill event that tested their prowess on land, and on and in water.

"[The] athletes ran, biked, kayaked, crawled, canoed, swam, dragged, and cursed their way through nearly 25 miles of western Maryland scenery," said Brad Jaeger of Triathlantic Association, one of the event's sponsors. "Beautiful weather and a great course made for a great weekend."

The Adventure Race began with a 3-mile run through the state park, followed by two 1-mile paddling loops around Herrington Lake which were separated by a 400-yard canoe portage. After completing the second loop, racers mounted their mountain bikes for a 12-mile loop that traversed Herrington Manor and Swallow Falls state parks, plus a portion of the Potomac Garrett State Forest. The bike race was followed by an obstacle course crawl, a cross-lake swim or "pull" (a rope was suspended at the water's surface for non-swimming or tiring competitors), and another 2-mile run which included a crossing of a recently timbered plot. The race culminated with a return swim across the lake and a second obstacle crawl.

A number of local athletes participated in the race, many of whom earned awards. Among those were the following coed Mixed Relay teams: Tom Bulhack and Audrey Kennedy, second place, 2:52:20; Jimmy Railey and Sarah Morgan, third, 2:58:11; and Steve Green and Brittany Bula, fourth, 3:03:40. Area residents Julie Portz and Lisa Whittemore entered as a female team. Three Adventure Sports program students from Garrett Community College also participated: Dan Dockery placed eighth in the Men's Solo competition with a time of 2:57:29; and Josh Frick and Chris Wilson placed ninth in the Men's Relay event with a time of 2:50:24.

Along with the Triathlantic Association, other Adventure Race sponsors included the Maryland Department of Natural Resources, Outerquest Schools, Railey Realty, High Mountain Sports, the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce, Bergers Cakes and Cookies, Cannella's Italian Deli, and Gatorade. A number of volunteers served to direct runners and bikers along the correct route, and Steve Green of High Mountain Sports helped park employees map out, clear, and mark several of the trails.



"WE CAN MAKE IT!" — Two local competitors in Sunday's Adventure Race at Herrington Manor State Park are shown nearing the finish line of the land- and water-based running, biking, crawling, and canoeing race. Brittany Bula, left, and Steve Green placed fourth in the Coed Mixed Relay Team category. (People were running around in shorts . . . seems like ages ago.)

Southern Netters Down Beall, Westmar; Up Record To .500

It was a perfect week for the Southern High School varsity volleyball team, as the Rams downed previously unbeaten Beall Monday and swept to three straight 15-0 wins over Westmar last night to pull their record up to 3-3.

Southern took the first two games at Beall 15-2 and 15-13, and just missed a sweep by falling in Game 3 by a narrow 17-15 margin. The Rams faltered again in the fourth game, a 15-3 loss, but rebounded in a big way to take the match in a 15-6 nightcap.

Senior Holli Harris paced SHS to victory with 14 points, three aces, and three kills, while junior teammate Kristen Rollman dished out 15 assists. Ram Erika Steyer, also a junior, garnered five kills. Lori Blank led Beall with 12 service points, and Angie Johnson had 21 kills and seven aces for the Mountaineers. Courtney Kessel added 15 Beall assists.

Southern's junior varsity unit took its match as well, as sophomore Megan Pike and freshman Megan Swartzentruber tallied six points each. Stacey Corwell had 10 points for the hosts.

Last night's home match was all Southern, as the Rams rolled to three straight 15-0 wins over the visiting Wildcats. Harris led the way again with 21 points and five aces, Rollman had five assists, and senior Erin Frantz and sophomore Alexis Storey both contributed five kills.

The Ram JVs ran away with their match as well, scoring 15-0, 15-2 wins. Pike scored 10 points and had four aces, while freshman Lindsey Strubin put nine points on the board.

Southern aims to turn the corner in the direction of a winning season Monday night at Hampshire. Beall will visit Oakland Wednesday evening to try for its revenge. The Rams' varsity (3-3) match gets under way at 7 p.m., following the jayvee (4-2) match, which begins at 6 p.m.

Saturday's trip to CC-Beaver was a lopsided affair, as the Lakers fell in three straight, 30-13, 30-20, and 30-15. Harvey recorded four points and three kills, and Johnson had four points and two kills.

Monday evening's battle with arch-rival Potomac State ended in a 3-1 defeat for Garrett, as the Catamounts took a 30-14 opener, GCC prevailed in Game 2 by a 30-28 score, and the hosts reeled off consecutive 30-21 triumphs.

Stillwagon's 11 points, four aces, and seven assists led Garrett, while Johnson tallied 10 points, seven blocks, and nine aces. Unger had seven points and two kills, and DeWitt contributed five points, eight assists, and 21 digs. ROARING KNOB
by Donna Butler

Heavy fog moved in on the raceway on Saturday night, turning the two-day King of the Knob Spectacular into a three-day event. Dave Groves claimed the fog-shortened Late Model main.

Jim Crossland and Dave Summers also took wins on Saturday. Ron Parrish, Eric Hay, and Jim Sayler scored Sunday's makeup features.

A stellar field of Late Models took the green for the Ken Nicholson and Sons feature event. Gary Dalton started on the pole by virtue of eliminator and dash wins. Piloting the Buzzo 23, Dalton led the charge into turn one and kept the pace for the first 15. Seventh starter Dave Groves had worked his way into second by lap 11, and he took over the point on the 16th circuit. At the halfway point, Groves led, followed by Dalton, Lynn Geisler, and Rich Gardner. Dalton dropped out on the 21st circuit. Groves drove away for the win, followed by Lynn Geisler, Denny Chamberlain, and Rich Gardner.

Plenty of action back through the field saw a number of drivers make big advances. Tenth starter Tom Myers took fifth, 17th starter Chris Peterman came in sixth, and Mel Minnick finished seventh from 23rd. The rest of the top 10 were Gary Tonkery, Steve Everhart from 15th, and D.J. Cline from 21st. The scheduled 50 lapper was checkered at 40 due to fog.

Sammy Stile took the fast time bonus.

Jim Crossland took his first in the Fort Necessity Garage 4-Cylinder Stocks. Following were Jeff Dillinger, Dane Burnworth, Floyd Carey, and Bob Miller.

Fan favorite Dave Summers claimed another win in the Fort Necessity Garage 4-Cylinder Modifieds. Mike Lewis took second, with Tom Simpson third.

As the fog continued to roll in, the decision was made to postpone the remaining events until Sunday.

Sunday was bright and clear, a perfect day for the Caney Valley Sport and Marine AMRA Road Warriors. Most of the points leaders were on hand. Anyone who returned for the postponed event was treated to an awesome display of driving skills. Polesitter John Burdette controlled the first 21 circuits, but with eight cautions in the event, the field continuously tightened up. Shawn Davis challenged Burdette over the first 10. Ron Parrish took a shot for several laps, until Davis moved up for another try on lap 15. Parrish took second once more on the 19th, and passed for the point on lap 22.

The event was filled with side-by-side action among the top five. Parrish was first to view the checkered, followed by Burdette, Jess Hartman, Aaron Morey, and Davis.

The VitaLink-QCOL Classic Lites battled yellow fever, with 13 cautions thrown in the 20-lap event. Polesitter Nick Hendricks brought out the first yellow with a lap 1 spin, handing the point to Bob Bolin. Bolin showed the way over the next 13, when Eric Hay slipped past and made it stick for the win. Jim Kurpakis finished second, followed by Bolin, Lynn Knepper, and Billy Vargo. Hendricks claimed both the fast time bonus and the dash.

Jim Sayler dropped in and left with over $1,200 claiming the win and the dash for the Country Charm Hot Stocks. Sayler led flag to flag, followed by John Redshaw, Jim Byers, Scott Spade, and Jim Bendishaw Jr. Harry Smith took the fast time bonus.

The King of the Knob marks the end of another exciting race season.

Ram Golfers Finish Second In Region Tourney; Set For States

Southern High School's varsity golf team earned a berth in next month's Maryland State Golf Championship Tournament by recording a second-place finish, just one stroke behind Smithsburg, in Tuesday's Western Maryland Region Tourney in Hagerstown. Northern High came in 14th in the 20-team field to miss a shot at the state competition.

SHS's Nathan Swartzentruber won the individual regional championship, as his even-par 72 led the Rams to a team score of 312. Smithsburg's 311 led the pack, while Walkersville was third with 324. NHS recorded a team score of 367.

Southern's Matt Skidmore carded a 76 and Travis Friend tallied a 79, landing both in the top 10 individual golfers, and teammate Andrew Feather shot an 85.

Joining those Rams at the Maryland state tournament, in the girls' competition, will be Southern's Natalie Winter, whose 86 in the girls' region championship earned her a trip to the Oct. 22-23 state finals at the University of Maryland. Smithsburg's Ashley Greer paced the girls' regional field with a 70.

SONGCATCHER

Rated PG-13 - Running Time: 1:52 - Released 12/1/00
(Local Release: 9/21/01)

Another low-budget, big-integrity, independent film struggling its way through the U.S. theater circuit many months after its original release, Songcatcher delivers a dose of backwoods Americana with the same kind of scary-yet-fascinating charm as Deliverance or Boys Don't Cry, but since it deals more with musicology than murder, it doesn't pack quite the same emotional punch as those films. Telling the story of a female music professor in the early 20th century who hikes into the rural mountains of North Carolina to collect and document local folk music and its ancient European derivations, the film has heart but lacks the kind of story and character development necessary to thoroughly engage an audience. Writer/director Maggie Greenwald (The Ballad of Little Jo) is obviously a stickler for period authenticity; her film foregoes the glitz of Hollywood for the grit of life in the Appalachian Mountains, and the product is as real as they come. But there is an emotional sterility to the characters and the subject matter may be of little interest to anyone but musicologists, lesbians, or fans of old-timey country love songs.

After being passed over (again) for a professorship at the University of North Carolina, Dr. Lily Penleric (Janet McTeer) decides to set out on her own and visit her sister Eleanor (Jane Adams), who runs a school in the remote mountain town of Clover. At first oblivious to the fact that Eleanor and her teaching partner, Harriet (E. Katherine Kerr), are lovers, Lily is enraptured with the songs sung by a teenage girl named Deladis Slocumb (Emmy Rossum), songs which Lily knows are derived from ancient English ballads. Soon she has obtained a grant from the university to study the local music, and is trudging from cabin to cabin documenting songs like "Barbara Allen," "Two Sisters," and "Conversation With Death," even going so far as to record the locals' singing on phonograph cylinders.

Though the backwoods population, wary of outsiders, at first suspect Lily's intentions, most of them eventually come around, reveling in the attention she pays them and in the magic of the amazing recording device. One of her most reliable sources turns out to be an aging woman named Viney Butler (Pat Carroll), but Viney's grandson Tom (Aidan Quinn) isn't as welcoming, seeing Lily as nothing more than a big-city snob with plans to exploit the age-old traditions of the country folk. It is not long until Lily and Tom reconcile their differences, but even as they begin to fall in love, violence erupts when Eleanor's secret is discovered.

While this film is remarkably genuine in its re-creation of early 20th-c. mountain society and its music (old timers will no doubt recall many of the ballads sung), and the a capella singing is raw and earnest, the plot of the film is rather dry and uncompelling to anyone not already versed in its subject matter. True, there are other aspects of the story than just the collection of songs, but these elements are largely glossed over and underdeveloped. For instance, the two women who run the school turn out to be the catalyst for the film's major turning point, but little is known about them or their teaching style. Though we see them interacting as lovers, we never see them in class, which seems the more important aspect of their characters given the film's conclusion. Moreover, the character of Lily is explored as a scholar and a scientist, but not really as a woman; her personality seems overly clinical until a sudden event occurs which seems to change everything about her. This character reversal seems to happen among many of the cast members; writer/director Greenwald seems so involved in period verisimilitude that she occasionally tends to overlook human nature. Still, Songcatcher is better than 75% of films in theaters today, blending the earthy integrity of the rural poor with the honest performances of a talented cast. ★★★★

THE MUSKETEER

Rated PG-13 - Running Time: 1:45 - Released 9/7/01

Just when we didn't need another film version of Alexandre Dumas's classic novel The Three Musketeers, here comes one. Director Peter Hyams (2010, End Of Days) oversees yet another retelling of the famous "all for one/one for all" story, adapted for the screen by Gene Quintano, whose writing credits include such venerable titles as Police Academy 3 and Operation Dumbo Drop. The Musketeer offers beautiful sets and costumes with Crouching Tiger- inspired combat choreography by Xin Xin Xiong, but suffers from lackluster performances by almost its entire cast. Hyams is hoping that the new-fangled wall-climbing swordplay will compensate for the inexperience of the young and relatively unknown cast members populating most of the central roles. It doesn't.

This story of 17th-century French fencer D'Artagnan (Justin Chambers) and his enlistment in the king's elite guard known as the Musketeers (who, by the way, don't carry muskets) is a slow, plodding affair with little to recommend it beyond the inventive action scenes and the oppulent set decoration. Chambers and his romantic opposite, American Pie/Beauty Mena Suvari, create zero chemistry in their supposed passion for each other, and the film's main villain, played by Tim Roth, is well over the top. Roth seems to be competing with himself; his character is basically a French version of his Gen. Thade (from Planet Of The Apes) in the overacting category. Except this time he's wearing leather instead of rubber.

The film's opening text informs us that in the mid 1600s, France's King Louis XIII (Daniel Mesguich), suffering from illness, is weak and ineffective, and the country is really being run by his devious chief minister, Cardinal Richelieu (Stephen Rea). In fact, Richelieu has appointed his own guardsmen to replace the king's aging and increasingly powerless musketeers, and he has also enlisted the bloodthirsty mercenary Febre (Roth) to agitate tensions between France and Spain.

D'Artagnan has harbored a grudge for Febre from the moment he watched the rogue officer kill his parents. Now a man, the young swordsman meets up with musketeers Athos (Jan Gregor Kremp), Porthos (Steven Spiers), and Aramis (Nick Moran), whose main hobbies seem to be drinking, throwing knives at a picture of the cardinal, and squabbling among themselves. Hoping to join their group and wage battle against the cardinal's guard, he helps them free their leader from prison. Impressed by his swordplay and re-invigorated by his youthful exuberance, they again take up arms against their dastardly foe in the red riding hood. But just as the musketeers plan a major fight to thwart Febre's plan to murder the British Lord Buckingham (Jeremy Clyde), D'Artagnan disappears into the woods. On a special mission. With his girlfriend and the queen. Oh, yeah.

As swashbuckling action movies go, this film is about as average as you can get. It provides fight scenes in all sorts of unnecessarily difficult places (roof beams, carriage tops, tall ladders, etc.), but if you're looking for thoughtful acting or an insightful script, you might want to look elsewhere. Occasional attempts at humor usually fall flat, and the principal actors seem to be waiting for a more interesting part to come their way. Chambers is bland and Roth is overbaked. Rea plays his character as if he's either distracted or stoned; ditto for Suvari. And the supporting musketeers are largely interchangeable. Though it may appeal to fans of swordplay and Hong-Kong-flavored action choreography, this film is definitely not One For All. ★★★

SOUL SURVIVORS

Rated PG-13 - Running Time: 1:25 - Released 9/7/01

Stephen Carpenter's Soul Survivors is an interesting but flawed and somewhat frustrating study on brain injuries and their nightmarish effect on those who sustain them. Carpenter, the writer/director/cinematographer who has produced a handful of such films (my favorite of his titles is The Dorm That Dripped Blood), shows a definite talent for subtle horror, with a suitably creepy trip through the subconscious of its main character. He does a good job keeping us guessing at what's going on, but frequently overdoes the effect, lapsing into such incoherency that we don't know where the red herrings end and the legitimate plot threads begin. His cast, made up of virtually unknown teens, is adequate, especially lead actress Melissa Sagemiller (Get Over It), who supplies a credible performance as a girl who, after suffering a bonk on the head in a car accident, can't decide whether she's crazy or everyone else is. I can't discuss specifics without giving away the "big surprise," but suffice it to say the film has the effect of looking through a one-way mirror (but not knowing which side you're on).

The film starts with Cassie O'Neil (Sagemiller) saying goodbye to her boyfriend Sean (Casey Affleck) as he is about to ship off to college. Though she admits she's going to miss him, she balks at returning his "I love you." Then, after a few minutes inside a rowdy dance club full of suspicious characters, they decide to leave with Cassie's ex-boyfriend Matt (Wes Bentley) and his girlfriend Annabel (Eliza Dushku). Next thing you know, they have a head-on collision and Cassie finds herself being rushed to the operating room of the hospital, not knowing the status of her friends. Then she finds out the worst possible news. Although they were all critically injured in the accident, Sean was the only one who didn't make it.

From this point on, Cassie's world is a confusing mix of dreamlike experiences and startlingly real hallucinations. She tries to begin school with Matt and Annabel, and they try to help her get through the guilt and tragedy of losing Sean, but she continues to spiral into insanity, regularly seeing Sean, who provides comfort, but also being pursued by some of the shady people from the club. Matt, seizing the opportunity to reconcile with her, tries everything he can to calm her down, but her visions continue to plague her. She sees blood in odd places, she gets inexplicable responses from people she talks to, and she keeps seeing Sean, who keeps telling her to "follow him" even though she knows he's dead. Another person who has a comforting effect is the school's priest, Father Jude (Luke Wilson). He tells her to stop by his office any time she wants to talk, but when she tries to find him again, she gets the old "he's been dead 20 years" reply.

This film comes perilously close to being another below-average teen horror flick, but is saved by Sagemiller's honestly nutty performance and director Carpenter's intriguing vision of what is seen by a person with a severe head injury. Although most of the important mysteries are explained in the final reel, there are many minor details left unanswered. The backing performances by the actors playing Cassie's friends are nothing special, although Dushku does give Annabel a sharp sense of attitude. But even with its faults, Soul Survivors is a serviceable entry in the low-budget horror column, and makes the most of its limited resources with stirring imagery and a full-blown performance by its star. ★★★½ that I had been there and done that before. On December 8, 1941, the day after the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor, I was a student in college. All classes at the University of Pittsburgh were dismissed that Monday morning so we could hear President Roosevelt address the nation. We stood on the floor of the great Commons Room in the Cathedral of Learning and on the balconies around it to hear the words we would never forget... "a day which will live in infamy," "a state of war exists." We listened without speaking, not yet knowing that our world would be forever changed, just as September 11 has changed the world for those young students on the college lawn, and for all of us.

So many images of the past week reflect scenes of that other war. The rescue workers raising the flag over the mountain of rubble at the World Trade Center while the smoke of devastation swirled around them were equally heroic with those brave Marines on Iwo Jima who stormed and took Mt. Suribachi. Several days ago I watched on television as the mighty aircraft carrier Theodore Roosevelt got under way at Norfolk and sailed out to meet her battle group, her officers and crew in dress whites standing at attention along the rail. Fifty-seven years ago I had watched my husband's ship and other ships sail through those waters on their way to and from the war, their officers in Navy khaki and their crews in dungarees. Separations were a way of life then, just as they will be for many of us again in the months ahead. For nearly four years we wrote V-mails, listened to radio reports of the battles, and read casualty lists in the daily papers. This new war has begun with more American casualties than the attack on Pearl Harbor, and there will probably be more. Somehow it all seems closer because we see it in our living rooms.

During the year I was stationed at the Norfolk Navy Yard as a disbursing officer in the WAVES, I saw ships that had been hit by kamikazes and had limped back from the Pacific to the yard that could repair them. There was the Essex carrier Intrepid, her forward gun turrets gone and a gaping hole in her flight deck, and the jeep carrier Sangamon, now a hull with a mass of twisted metal where her island and flight deck had been. Those images are indelible in my memory, as will be the scenes of September 11. The fanatic Japanese pilots who became human bombs as they dived their planes into our ships wore white headbands and drank saki before they took off on their sacrificial flights. We are told that the hijackers wore red headbands, but their purpose was the same.

Out of the horror of September 11 has risen a renewed wave of patriotism, as Americans once again proudly display the flag and wear their colors. We must keep this spirit alive in the months and years ahead. We must be vigilant and resolute. There can be no wavering of purpose. Once more we have a president we can trust who has surrounded himself with experienced and competent leaders. We must now trust them, keep our faith in God, and face the future with strength and confidence. America will not only endure, she will prevail!

allocate between $800 and $1,000, the society would have to suspend the program this year, even though several schools had already scheduled visits and activity books for the students had already been printed. He further explained that the money would only be used for transporting the students, and the society could find other sources for funding next year.

The Republican contacted a representative of the Smith Foundation, Pat Conroy, who said that he had called Boal several times since receiving his letter inquiring about possible funding in April to inform him that the foundation was going through some changes and would not be able to fund the program this year, but that he was unsuccessful in reaching him.

Conroy indicated that he would try again to speak to Boal and explain the situation. He indicated that the foundation would probably "work together with the society in the future" after it had reorganized and evaluated its priorities.

Members of the Historical Society told the commissioners in their meeting that the students' visits to the museum are very "hands on" and educational. Jane Fox added that not only do the visits stimulate the students' interests in local and state history, but it also inspires their teachers to be better instructors. Additionally, she said, the students who visit often bring their siblings and parents to the museum later, who also become interested in local history.

Commissioner Ernest Gregg said that he had spoken to several students about their visits to the museum and "was impressed by how enthusiastic the students were days, or even weeks, after their visits."

The commissioners unanimously approved giving the society $1,000, which raises the total amount of funding to the Historical Society for this year to $4,500.

"Thank you for supporting the children of Garrett County," Boal told the commissioners.

Clears Creek

Mines.

The 40-foot tall doser, which is camouflaged to blend in with its surroundings as much as possible, is located along Cherry Creek north of the Y-intersection of Rock Lodge Road and State Park Road. Identical to the doser that has been successfully treating acid mine drainage in Lost Land Run for the past several years, the Cherry Creek doser diverts water flowing from upstream and channels it into a two-sectioned bucket hanging inside the structure.

Similar to a child's "teeter-totter" toy, one section of the bucket fills before the water's weight causes it to tip over and spill into a trough as the bucket's other section begins filling immediately. Every time the bucket tips over, a nearby plate mechanism is activated and a measured quantity of limestone dumps into the same trough the water spills into. The resulting slurry mixture is then piped into the middle of Cherry Creek, where it is discharged directly into the water. The highly acidic creek water is buffered by the high alkalinity of the slurry flow, as if a giant antacid tablet had been dropped into the water.

"We saw a significant improvement in Cherry Creek's water quality almost immediately" said Joseph Mills of the Bureau of Mine's Mine Reclamation office in Frostburg. "This doser and other nearby treatments we are utilizing could lower the annual acid load in Deep Creek Lake by as much as 50 percent."

The Bureau of Mines and DNR's Fisheries Service will monitor the doser's impact through semi-annual water samplings. A more readily observable measure of the water quality improvement will be the expected "recolonization of Cherry Creek and the adjacent lake area by fish," said DNR Fisheries Service biologist Ken Pavol. DNR and the Yough Chapter of Trout Unlimited will also perform routine inspections and maintenance of the doser.

The doser will also eventually serve as an educational tool, as the collaborating groups are also working together design an explanatory display for the DCL State Park Discovery Center. The Sprenger-Lang Foundation will sponsor a design competition later this year.

"We are proud to be part of this collaboration," said Paul Sprenger, trustee of the Sprenger-Lang Foundation. "All parties have been generous with their time and expertise. The participation of the Rock Lodge Foundation was particularly important in making this possible for they made the site available. We hope this project will be a model for others who share the goal of good water quality for their lakes and streams."

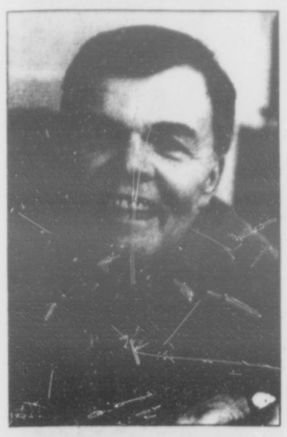
Dietz To Portray Jesus At FSU



Noted actor and author Norman Dietz will present his one-man show, "Testament: A Life of Jesus," at Frostburg State University on Wednesday, Oct. 10, at 7:30 p.m in the Lane University Center.

Calling his presentation "a testament for the 21st century," Dietz interweaves verses from the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John to create a compelling portrait of Jesus as a man of action who struggled against the religious and political establishment of his era. Dietz uses language that is contemporary and colloquial, yet true to the elegant, poetic cadences of the King James Version of the Bible. His goal is to present what he calls "a tale of understandable human emotion and political conflict [that] celebrates the impenetrable mystery of human existence."

"Norman Dietz has achieved some notable results," says the New York Times. "Colorful and religiously vibrant work."

"Testament" is free and open to the public. For more information, persons may call Larry Neumark at 301-687-7490.

FSU To Host Grammy Winner Poncho Sanchez

Grammy-winner Poncho Sanchez and his Latin Jazz Band will perform at Frostburg State University's Cordts Center Main Arena on Saturday, Oct. 13, at 8 p.m. This event is part of FSU's Cultural Events Series.

Born in Texas, Sanchez grew up in California to the strains of Afro-Cuban music. He began playing the congas in high school and got his big break when he had the chance to play with his idol, vibraphonist Cal Tjader. For the next seven years, he played congas in Tjader's band. He formed his own group in 1980. The band has issued 18 recordings, including 1999's Grammy-winning "Latin Soul." His latest release, "Soul of the Conga," features jazz giants Terence Blanchard on trumpet and Joey DeFrancesco on organ.

The veteran conguero — translated "conga player" — says he is on a mission to share his musical passion for what he describes as "homegrown American music for everybody."

"Our main goal is always to keep Latin jazz alive, growing, and moving, while being authentic to the music we love," said Sanchez. "This music is not just for Latino people. It was born in the United States, and it is American music."

"As Elvis is to rock and James Brown is to soul, Poncho Sanchez is to salsa...particularly to the congas...," said Scott Lenz of the Los Angeles Times.

Dinner theatre specials are available prior to the performance at the following dinner theatre partner restaurants: Fratelli's Italian Restaurant, Giuseppe's Italian Restaurant, JB's Steak Cellar, Leone's at Silver Tree at Deep Creek Lake, and Oxford House. Each special includes a uniquely designed meal with non-alcoholic beverages, tax, and gratuity. Dinner theatre specials can be purchased through the CES Box Office.

For information and ticket purchases, and for dinner-theatre menu selections and reservation purchases, persons may contact the FSU CES Box Office Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 301-687-3137 or toll free at 1-886-849-9237. Order requests can also be faxed to 301-687-7049 or e-mailed to CES@frostburg.edu. Based on availability, tickets may also be purchased at the Cordts Center Arena Box Office one hour prior to the performance. For information and ticket availability on the day of the show, persons may call 301-687-4411. All patrons must have a ticket, and all ticket sales are final.

This tour of Poncho Sanchez is made possible by a grant from the Mid-Atlantic Arts Foundation in partnership with the National Endowment for the Arts Regional Touring Program.

MAJOR CHANGES AT ALL AIRPORTS across the country have been initiated in order to step up security in light of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. Allen Lewis, an Oakland resident, is employed by the Bombardier Aerospace Company at the Harrison-Marion Regional Airport in Bridgeport, W.Va., where he works as a mechanic. The barricaded checkpoint of the air field is pictured above. Lewis said there is now only one entrance to the facility. On Sept. 11, all flying planes were ordered to land, and one aircraft operated by Atlantic Coast Airlines of Dulles, Va., landed at the Bridgeport field. The passengers were ushered off and taken to local motels, and the plane was repositioned. It was then searched for explosive devices by Lewis and other Bombardier employees. Despite the recent cutbacks to the country's major airlines, Lewis reported that Bombardier is "plenty busy with maintenance checks and modifications."

State Supports Those Called To Active Duty

Demonstrating the state's strong support for the National Guard and military reserves, Governor Parris N. Glendening announced that Maryland will cover the full cost of family health benefits for Maryland state employees who are called to active duty. The governor also urged private industry and the state's university system to follow the state's lead.

"Marylanders have a proud and distinguished heritage of serving our country and going above and beyond the call of duty. We are proud that so many of our state employees are National Guard members and reservists," said Gov. Glendening. "We will take aggressive steps to do all we can to help the families of Maryland state employees who are called to duty. As these Marylanders go off to protect and serve our nation, they will have peace of mind knowing that their families will continue to be cared for by their family doctors instead of having to worry about transferring into a different system."

The governor's action helps to eliminate the disruption of medical coverage to families that can occur when a person gets called to active duty. Normally, when state employees are called to active duty they are enrolled in the military health system and their family coverage can significantly differ from their state plans.

More importantly, now the family will be able to keep its current physicians instead of having to transfer into the military network.

The new policy will go into effect immediately and becomes automatic as soon as any Maryland state employee is called to duty. The policy will cover any spouse, dependent, or family member that the employee has designated for coverage. Employees are encouraged to talk to their agency's personnel officer, who is fully briefed and can answer any questions that may arise.

In addition, the governor has alerted all state agencies to allow maximum flexibility regarding implementation of rules and regulations affecting those who are National Guard members or reservists. For example, the university presidents are being asked to accommodate both students and staff called to duty.

For students, the governor is asking that universities make sure they can return to their academic career when the time comes and that tuition waivers or reimbursements be given when appropriate.

The governor is also urging the university system, as well as Maryland private industry, to follow the state's lead and maintain family health benefit coverage for employees called to serve the country.

Local Reaction To WTC, Pentagon Assault Still Expressed In Writings

As Garrett Countians continue to absorb the events of Sept. 11 in New York, Washington, D.C., and Pennsylvania, many are moved to express their stories or their poetry. On this page is a collection of those expressions.

The following was submitted by CLINT BRADLEY.

My wife Linda and I make our home in Hyattsville, but have a second residence at Deep Creek Lake. Linda works as an elementary school librarian and I work as an accountant for the Department of Housing and Urban Development at the headquarters building, just off the National Mall.

The week of the attack started for me taking Monday, Sept. 10, off to visit my father on the Eastern Shore. He had just been diagnosed with cancer and wanted to discuss his affairs and his upcoming treatment with my brother and myself. On Tuesday, Sept. 11, when I returned to work, it was this I was thinking about. I normally arrive at work early, generally before 7 a.m.

The attack began. Next to my office is the conference room with a TV. Two of the senior staff went in to watch the reports about the World Trade Center. Initially, I did not believe them, but it became real all too soon. As the entire office was discussing the WTC, the Pentagon was attacked. You could see the smoke from our building. I and others decided we needed to leave. We did not wait for official dismissal. I called my wife at her school and amazingly got through. I planned to walk home, fearing an attack on the subway, which I normally take.

To walk home, I have to go north, crossing the National mall between the Smithsonian and the Capitol building. I started to walk around 10 a.m. Within minutes the sidewalks were filled. Traffic within a couple of blocks became grid-locked and it was faster to be on foot. Oddly, tourists who had not gotten the word were still taking pictures. I crossed the Mall and eventually caught a subway home several stops north of where I normally would. I arrived home around 11:30 to the news that the WTC had fallen. I also learned that the fourth plane had gone down in Pennsylvania, apparently through the heroic efforts of some on board. While no information has been forthcoming as to the destination of that plane, I believe, given the timing of the flight and other considerations, it was headed for the Capitol building, where the Congress would have been meeting to respond to the developing attack. I could easily have been crossing the mall when this occurred. I will always be grateful for the passengers on that plane.

As our family got in touch with each other, I learned more about my father's condition and upcoming treatment and prognosis. I also learned that my cousin was working in the Pentagon for the contracting firm renovating the section of the building that was hit. He was on a ladder with his head above the ceiling tiles when the impact knocked him to the ground. A fireball engulfed the ceiling where his head would have been. He was able to get up and lead several others out of the building to safety.

On September 18, Linda and I celebrated our 25th wedding anniversary. When the week of the attacks began, my thoughts were of my father and his condition. We assume so much. We take for granted so much. This time and these events have vividly reminded me not to do this. Each moment is a gift. If nothing else, we should all strive to live every day with purpose and thankfulness and prayer.

THE 911 TRAGEDY

This day is nine eleven, and nobody knew about the Boeing 767s.
There were thousands surprised, and thousands deprived,
of their once normal lives.

Then there was one and then another,
that pierced the heart of the World Trade Center.
They came falling down and scattered around,
as lives upon lives were shattered.

Then there was one that collided with the Pentagon, it shattered rooms from A to E and then everyone knew of the tragedy.

But there's still one more,
that crashed before it could unleash its horror.
This one plane could have been blamed for thousands of more life-shattering horrors.

A MILITARY MOTHER'S PRAYER
by Libby Kitzmiller

Oh, dear Lord, my heart is bleeding for all the hugs our sons are needing for all the folks who said good-bye for all the tears I saw them cry.
For all the ones left far behind for all the memories in my mind for all the heads hung down in sorrow feeling that there's no tomorrow.
Oh, dear Lord, watch o'er our men
So we may hold them once again.

UNTITLED

I didn't know your name.
I wouldn't have recognized you in the street.
I don't know anything about you.
Yet I mourn you like a sister.

You got up in the morning,
showered, dressed, got your children ready for school,
And headed off to work.
Just like me.
I didn't know your name,
Yet I mourn you like a friend.

You rode downtown.
You rode up the elevator.
You sat at your desk.
You began to work.
I didn't know your name,
Yet I mourn you like a child.

You set about your job.
Accomplishing tasks like every other day.
Then the sky exploded,
And you were gone.
I didn't know your name,
Yet I mourn you like a parent.

Your crime was simple,
To live in this country,
To work in that building,
To be an American.
I didn't know your name,
yet I mourn you, fellow American.

Goodbye
God bless
You will be missed.

By Irene Grubb, a government employee at Perry Point, Maryland, who recorded these thoughts about those on the job at the World Trade Center when the attacks were unleashed. The poem was submitted to The Republican by her father, John Tritsch, of McHenry.

RED WHITE AND BLUE

Hidden bomb,
Shot from the dark,
Plane as bombs,
Terror from abroad,
Death, killing and mayhem,
This is bin Laden, the pig offspring's world

Terror of the dark,
We will find you, Joe,
Terror of the dark,
You're now our biggest foe,
Terror of the dark,
Feel our mighty hammer blow,
Terror of the dark,
Your time is come that you should know

Red, White and Blue is the color of our flag
Red is the color for the blood that was spilled
White is the color for the missing people
Blue is the color of the tear that is shed
Bin Laden you coward, your time has come
We will unite and get stronger
Because we will not take this any longer
Red, White and Blue
United we stand
Like the color in our flag

RIBBON SALES RECOGNIZE RESCUE DOGS — Volunteers with the Garrett County Humane Society are sponsoring a benefit sale of red, white, and blue awareness ribbons in honor of the work done by K-9 rescue dogs and their handlers. A portion of each $1 ribbon sale will go to support the work of the K-9 rescue units in the World Trade Center tragedy. Hundreds of the K-9 units from around the country have been dispatched to the disaster site, where they continue to work amid extremely dangerous conditions to recover the bodies of victims and comfort fellow human searchers. The ribbons may be purchased at BumBle Q's Restaurant in McHenry, and at each Saturday's Tailgate Market sales in Oakland from now through Autumn Glory. Pictured from the left are BumBle Q's employees Sherry Bosley and Gayle Miller, along with restaurant customer Rev. Mike Robinson.

NHS COLLECTS MONEY FOR RELIEF FUND — The Peer Counselors and Contemporary Problems students at Northern High School, under the direction of Joanny Martin and Paul Edwards, joined forces to collect $2,100 for the National Disaster Relief Fund. The students raised $2,000 of that money and $100 was donated by Woodmen of the World. According to Martin, the Reader's Digest Foundation will match $2,000. They also collected non-perishable items for the families in the Somerset, Pa., area. Pictured above are the Peer Counselors and Contemporary Problems students.

"WHERE TWO OR MORE ARE GATHERED . . ." "See you at the pole" is the name of a national effort that encourages youth to gather at their schools before the official school hours to pray for their country and their peers. The initiative was started in 1990 by a small group of teenagers in Burleson, Texas, who were inspired to pray for their friends and their schools. Now the ceremony is held nationally once each year as a national day of prayer for students. Youngsters at Northern Middle and Northern High School (pictured above and below, respectively) gathered together at 7 a.m. on Wednesday, Sept. 19, to take part in the event, which was deemed especially important this year in light of recent national events. Gavin Friend Wins Essay Contest

A sixth grade student at Southern Middle School recently captured first place at the state level of the American Legion Auxiliary essay contest.

Gavin Friend, son of Rebecca and Robbie Cuppett, Oakland, and Leroy Friend, Beaver, Pa., was a fifth grade student at Dennett Road Elementary School when he wrote his essay last spring, using the topic "I Thank Veterans for My Freedom." He wrote about his uncle, who is a Vietnam War veteran.

Gavin's essay, which appears below, captured first place for the Proctor Kildow American Legion Post Auxiliary unit, for which he was awarded $25. He then won at the district level and received another prize of $25, after which his paper won at the state level and he was awarded a $200 U.S. savings bond.

The title for the next auxiliary's contest essay is "What Makes America Great."

I THANK VETERANS FOR MY FREEDOM
by Gavin Friend

I think it is important to recognize and give thanks to our veterans! November 11, 1919, was set aside as Armistice Day in the United States. Armistice Day was a day to celebrate and give recognition to those men and women who fought for peace in World War I. Congress voted Armistice Day a federal holiday in 1938. In 1954, after World War II, Congress amended the Act of 1938 and changed the name to Veterans Day. On June 1, 1954, November 11 became the day to honor all American veterans of all wars. We should honor those who have served our country and fought for our peace and freedom.

You may ask: "What is a veteran?" Veterans are men and women who serve our country in the Army, Navy, Air Force, or Marines. My uncle, Brad Upole, is a Vietnam veteran. He was in the 173rd Airborne Division of the Army. He was stationed in the Central Highlands of Vietnam for 13 months. Uncle Brad told me that fighting in a war is very lonely and scary, but at times, we must be willing to fight for our freedom and for peace.

Being a soldier is a very difficult job. A soldier must be brave. When you are fighting in a war you are away from your family and friends for a long time. Soldiers at war do not have the luxuries of home. Sometimes they may have to sleep in a foxhole in the ground or in the woods and walk many miles a day. The food they eat is not like we have at home. Soldiers must be physically fit and be willing to risk their lives for the freedoms we enjoy every day.

The United States is what freedom is about. I am proud of my country and of the men and women who have fought for our freedom. Sometimes, we take for granted "the little things" we enjoy as an American, such as: getting an education, having free religious beliefs, and the ability to choose where we live.

Thank you, veterans, for risking and giving your life for me!

If you enjoy your freedom, thank a veteran!

Notes from Bittinger

by Joan Sussman

Beulah Moon accompanied Larry and Ellen Moon to Savannah, Ga., for a visit and birthday celebration party for her grandson, James Moon. James is an Apache Helicopter pilot with the 3rd Aviation Regiment stationed at Hunter Air Base in Savannah.

I imagine that Beulah and her family feel deep concern over a possible war in the Mid-East. My cousin, Jennifer Adams-Kennel of Cumberland, told me that both her sons have just completed a term in the armed services. How scary, and it feels just like the 1970s when the Vietnam draft affected the many young men of my age group. Equally heartbreaking is the plight of the refugees flooding into Pakistan.

An informal meeting about how the Bittinger Lutheran Parish can be prepared with emergency funds to provide quick help when disasters strike (either manmade or natural) was held on Monday at the parsonage of Pastor Pat and Keith Pittsnogle. The tragedy in New York is still on many minds. Although there is still much needed there the immediate crisis is past. In fact, I talked with a close friend in New York this morning, Charles Hall, a former resident of Dung Hill Road, and thank goodness he is safe uptown on 46th Street. He and his family rarely go below 14th Street. He said the city is back in business and "They can't stop us." I happened to take Dung Hill Road as a short-cut between Accident and Grantsville, and as I passed his former residence a song that he had written for me, titled "Dung Hill" where reality is real there, came to mind. It certainly is a far cry from the scene on that mountain to downtown Manhattan.

Although it is still early in terms of autumn colors, I still saw a homey, safe blend of rusty brown on old oak trees and a pale yellow of hickorys and birch. A few splashes of scarlet on some maple trees and on the ground level were just at peak, with a few gold leaves on rhododendron bushes, goldenrods and a flash of orange and red on some branches of elders. The ferns that were on the forest floor and the roadside ranged from dark green to pale green, and light yellow, rusty, and dark brown. I saw a few widely spaced bunches of black-eyed susans and another big bush of yellow flowers. I didn't know what that was, but you can see it in the fall. In fact, my hill lawn already has many bright colored maple leaves. That is the real meaning of fall. For some reason, Brenneman's Grove does not yet show much color.

Back to the meeting at Pastor Pat's home to help celebrate her first anniversary of her ordination, as well as to start to develop a plan to establish a "Blessing Fund" to benefit people who do not have as many blessings as we do. To start this fund, members of our congregations will be asked to place a jar in their home and regularly put their spare change and other bills to give thanks for all our blessings in our lives. Then each church will place a large jar to receive the individuals' contributions. Other fund-raising ideas are still in the early stages.

A chili dinner prior to the community-wide interdenominational service will be held on the evening of October 28. The plan is to draft Rob Vagnetti to cook his excellent chili, to be served with rolls and desserts. Of course, Rob is not yet aware of the plan, as he is now in Italy to visit his homeland where he has not visited since a teenager. Meredith is somewhat anxious about his safety, but the high security now in place and Italy's very high profile security should see him arriving home safely.

I have started to see police patrolling the streets carrying sub-machine guns. Of course, nowhere is completely safe these days. Not even Bittinger or the rest of Garrett County provide safe refuge. I feel blessed that I am in a sturdy home with fuel oil, although it seems like I have a problem getting my furnace up and running. It is much more snug than outdoors in rugged hostile mountains in Asia without even a tent — also to have a well-stocked freezer and cabinet with plenty of food, whereas the refugees flee with just a wheelbarrow with a mattress and one pot hoping to find shelter and food.

Other ideas for fundraising included a big yard sale and auction, which will probably be held in the spring. Also plans to have Garrett County greeting cards made for sale were made.

Among those attending were Bruce and Barbara Keim, Connie Beachy, Leora Yaste, Audrey Brenneman, Glenna Gilpin, Mitch and Casey Fost, Pete and Linda Buckel, Glenn and Wayne Blocher, Wanda Reynolds, Carol and Emma Bass, Lottie Brenneman, Bob and Margie Brenneman, Ruth DiPaolo, and Claire and Joan Sussman. Linda Thomas from St. John's brought a big beautiful cake to celebrate Pastor Pat's anniversary, and of course, Keith was there too. I can't sort out who was from St. John's, Zion, and Emmanuel, and hope that I did not miss anyone else who attended. It was so interesting that the kids had plenty to say and were perfectly ready to voice their ideas and opinions.

It seems to me that a first pressing need is to help the refugees fleeing from Afghanistan as winter approaches. I am sure they are in need of lots of blankets. It would be fairly simple to collect a mass of blankets and take them to the Pakistan Embassy, since that country will bear the biggest burden trying to provide a safe haven.

Sally and Lenny Poholsky visited his parents, Mary and Andy Salak, in Kittanning, Pa., on Saturday.

Leah Stanton, Towson, and her mother, Cindy Stanton, met in Hagerstown last week and had a nice visit and shopping trip.

Sally Poholsky and Ferne Beachy visited Ruby and Pete Orendort and June and Bill Green in LaVale last Tuesday.

Word has been received here of the death of a former resident, Isaac (Ike) Metzler from Harrisonburg, Va., who died last Sunday following heart surgery. Funeral services will be held this today (Thursday) at Scarpelli Funeral Home in Cumberland. His sister, Kathryn Bowser, resides in Bittinger.

Jim and Donna Glotfelty were among the many guests attending the "End of Summer Bash" held Tuesday for employees and immediate family members of Railey Mountain Lake Vacations at Smiley's Fun Zone, McHenry. Fun, food, games, rides, golf, and laughter were enjoyed by all those attending.

Taylor Glotfelty, student at West Virginia University, and Laura Bach, student at Fairmont State College, visited Taylor's grandparents, Jim and Donna Glotfelty, Sunday evening. Taylor had traveled to Baltimore to visit Ryan Savage, who suffered a broken back while riding a 4-wheeler last week. Ryan expects to be transferred to a local hospital this week for further treatment and recuperation.

"SCHOOL TOOLS DRIVE" DEEMED A SUCCESS — Burlington United Methodist Family Services Inc. sponsored a collection drive for school supplies to benefit Garrett County students with the help of Wal-Mart and other local businesses. According to Sue Sines of Burlington Family Services, so many new and unused donations of all types of school supplies were collected that they will be able to support students for the entire school year. One collection box was located at the local Wal-Mart. Sines added she was pleased that not only customers purchased items but many store employees did also. Sines is pictured above with Carol Bonds of Wal-Mart, on the right. Persons with questions may call Sines at 301-334-1285.

Volunteers Needed For Local AARP Tax Aide Program

AARP Tax Aide, a community service sponsored by the Area Agency on Aging, is seeking volunteers for the local program to assist people, especially those over the age of 60, in filling out their tax returns.

This is a free service, and volunteers will be trained locally in cooperation with the Internal Revenue Service. Trained workers are expected to volunteer at least four hours a week.

This is the tenth year this free service has been available in Garrett County, which currently operates out of the Mary Browning Center.

For the 2000 tax season, 30,000 volunteers assisted 1.7 million in filing tax returns at 9,000 sites across the United States.

Persons interested in volunteering may call 301-387-6670 or 301-334-3153.

Renewal Series Set At Gortner Church

Gortner Union Church, located along Garrett Highway three miles south of Oakland, has slated a series of three renewal services for Friday through Sunday, Oct. 5-7. The services will take place at 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

The featured guest speaker will be Steve Abe, district director of the Westmarva District of the Church of the Brethren. For information, persons may call 301-334-3749.

Breastfeeding Class Slated

The monthly breastfeeding class for expectant and nursing mothers will be held Tuesday, Oct. 9, at 7 p.m., at the Community Services Building, located between Garrett County Memorial Hospital and Garrett Medical Group.

The class is sponsored by the hospital and Healthy Families Garrett County, and is held on the second Tuesday of each month.

Many topics will be discussed, including getting off to a good start, being sure the baby gets enough milk, planning rest and diet for the new mom, fitting breastfeeding into life with school or work, pumping and storing milk, and health benefits for mom and baby.

Having basic information about getting started and knowing what to expect makes breastfeeding much easier, said a spokesperson for Healthy Families. Family support is also very beneficial to the nursing mom and baby. Participants are encouraged to bring a partner, but this is not required. There is no charge for the class session.

Persons wanting more information may contact Healthy Families at 301-533-0001.

New Mathematics Professor Joins Garrett Faculty

Jeff Reitz, who at one time considered pursuing a career in ornamental horticulture, has been appointed associate professor of mathematics at Garrett Community College.

A native of eastern Pennsylvania, Reitz took an interest in the outdoors that prompted him to enter the horticultural program at Temple University, Philadelphia, where he received an associate in applied science degree. He then attended Penn State University, State College, where he earned a bachelor of science in mathematics, and the State University of New York at Binghamton, where he received both a master's degree and a doctorate in mathematics.

During his college years Reitz pursued his hobby of horticulture, identifying trees and flowers during backpacking and mountain biking excursions. He also spent some time at the gardens of Cornell Plantation.

For the past seven years Reitz has taught mathematics at Walker College in Alabama, a small rural college that became a campus of Bevill State Community College. The college was a bit larger than GCC, he said, with about 1,000 students.

Reitz sees a major difference between his former college and GCC in the mathematics program. "GCC is at the forefront of teaching math," he said. "Bevill State is still in the traditional mode, and students often fail to see the relationships between mathematics and their lives. With today's technology we can convey concepts and ideas and solve problems that can't be done with pencil and paper. That is why I came here. I want to learn more about the technology and use it in my classes."

Reitz will continue to pursue his outdoor avocation by hiking and biking through Garrett County and learning to cross-country ski. He said he is eagerly anticipating the fall colors of the area's sugar maples and other native trees.

Ginseng History Repeats Itself: Friend Finds More Large Roots

And Reflects On Own "Roots" As Well

by Renée Shreve

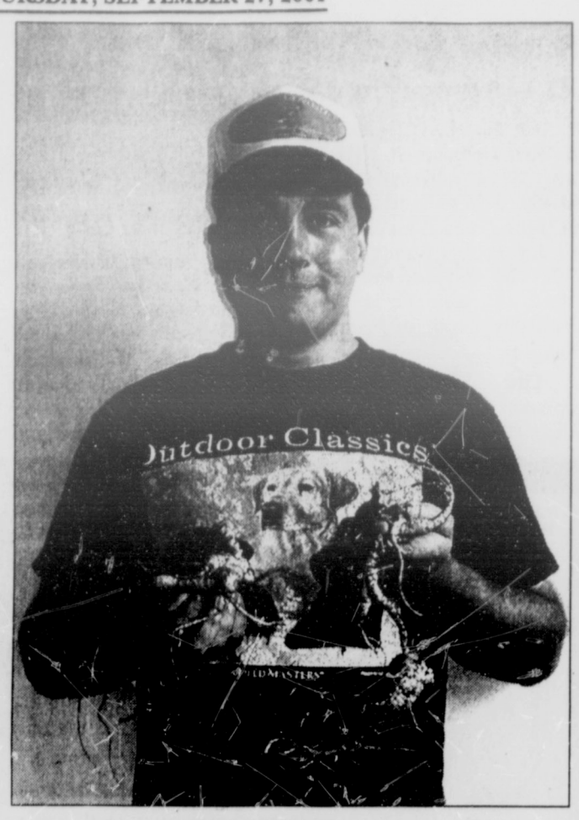
Children love life's simple pleasures and discoveries, roaming the woods, enjoying nature, finding buried treasure. If one is lucky, he or she will be able to carry that love for life's little wonders into adulthood. Gary A. Friend of Rosedale is, indeed, a fortunate man. He still loves looking for buried treasure, and he usually finds a gem or two.

Twenty-three years ago, when Friend, a third generation ginseng hunter, was 10, his picture ran in The Republican with a cutline that read "Very large roots were found at the ends of these two ginseng plants Sunday while 10-year-old Gary Friend was out ginseng hunting with his father, Robert Friend. One root weighs five ounces and the other nearly as much." The find was quite a accomplishment for the young "sanger" and could well have been an unmatchable feat.

Recently, 33-year-old Gary made yet another interesting discovery: an unusual 75-year-old root weighing 2.8 ounces and its 1.9 ounce, 18-year-old seedling. But the ages and sizes of the roots are just two of the interesting aspects about his find.

One remarkable feature about his discovery is that the plants were not located in a remote section of a forest. They were along a road, and Gary's father, an experienced ginseng hunter and former state park ranger, had probably passed the spot hundreds of times over the years and never even noticed them. But his son certainly did.

"It just blew my mind," the soft-spoken Gary said. "I was just out walking along a county maintained road,...happened to look over, and saw several [ginseng] plants with stalks that were big and heavy."



GARY A. FRIEND

Ironically, Gary, who has been off from work for two months due to lymphomic cancer, has not been strong enough to hike through the woods looking for "sang," as he normally does. He has been, though, trying to regain some of his strength and to brighten his mood by walking for short periods of time on easier terrain.

"Just looking at those bright red berries lifted my spirits," Gary said about finding the remarkable roots in a location that was so easily accessible for him. He firmly stresses, though, that his illness is treatable. But the remarkable discovery, he says, did provide him with "a ray of hope" about his situation.

It is, perhaps, not too ironic to discover a ginseng hunter finding some restorative powers from his own elusive quarry, given the root's reputation as a "cure all."

The twisted, forked roots of this popular herbal remedy resemble the human body. In fact, the Chinese name for ginseng, jen-shen, means "man-like." And because of this resemblance, for centuries many have believed that these roots have healing powers.

Though little scientific study has been done to determine if ginseng does contain a curative substance, many people throughout the world today still take the herb for a variety of reasons, such as to boost energy or to calm nerves. Dried ginseng root can be chewed, brewed as a tea, taken in pill form, or used in a wide variety or form.

Wild, American ginseng, which is believed to be the most potent variety, sells for up to $500 a pound when dried. But because ginseng connoisseurs place premiums on age and appearance, Gary's unusually shaped, 75-year-old root may be more valuable fresh. A root's age is determined by the number of ring-shaped growths on the "neck," leading to the base of the root. Gary describes his find as a "specialty" or "showcase" root having a unique "bulb" shape, instead of the usual "cluster" shape. Therefore, according to professional ginseng grower and dealer Bill Slagle of Friendsville, rather than being ground up for medicinal purposes, a ginseng executive may want to buy the old "man-like" root for as much as $250 and frame it in a velvet-lined glass case to display on his or her office wall. Bill has been in contact with just such a potential buyer in New York City.

Gary, who has the required ginseng collecting permit from the Maryland Department of Agriculture, is quick to point out, though, that the joy of finding such a rare root far outweighs any monetary reward he could receive.

Besides taking pleasure in finding the roots themselves, he also seems to enjoy being grilled about where he made his discovery. Though many have tried to get him to reveal his source, he just keeps reiterating, "I was just walking along a county maintained road...," whenever he is asked to disclose the not-so-secret location.

He chuckled when he recalled his pastor, surprised at his secrecy, saying, "You mean you won't even tell me?"

Gary's father reportedly told the shocked pastor, "Now, you know he can't do that!"

The reverend should not be too surprised. Because, after all, a man confessing his sins to his pastor is understandable, but revealing his secret "sang" patch, well, that is an entirely different matter. Locations of favorite patches, like fishing spots, are sacred.

Finding such aged roots has also caused the quiet, philosophical Gary to reflect upon his own "roots" and how the world has changed since his grandfather, Wes Friend, hunted ginseng as a livelihood. For example, now, thanks to modern technology and computers, Gary and Bill can now use the Internet to do research, find buyers, or look up the Department of Agriculture's web page on ginseng management.

But Gary also sadly notes that old, large roots are even more rare today than when he made his own youthful discovery in 1978. Many collectors today, he says, only "sang" as a hobby and will harvest an entire patch to make quick money, instead of leaving some to harvest later.

Gary says he always leaves some plants. The patch where he found his latest prize actually included several plants, but he only harvested the biggest roots, as he was taught.

"My grandfather always told me to dig only the biggest ones and leave the others in the patch to grow," he said.

State law requires that only older plants with at least three stems be collected, and then only after they have produced their berries in August. Collectors must also leave the seed-bearing berries behind, so they can produce new plants.

The world has, indeed, gone through many changes since Wes Friend roamed the forests looking for sang. Technology has turned the well-worn cliché "It's a small world" into a very apt adage. For example, when events happen in another part of the world, one learns about it mere seconds after it occurs, such as when terrorists crash planes into heavily populated buildings.

Gary has, as millions of others have, also reflected upon those events and the fragility of life.

The potential buyer for Gary's roots that Bill contacted in New York City, has, understandably, not been returning his messages. Gary and Bill believe that the buyer's office was located in the Word Trade Center. It is, indeed, "a small world." The unassuming ginseng hunter seems more concerned that someone whom he has never even met may be injured, or killed, than he is about his own illness.

After reflecting over the events that occurred a little over two weeks ago, Gary is seriously considering reburying his golden treasure. It has lost some of its luster. He says that he wishes that he had not dug it up at all, and that he should have let the roots continue to grow undisturbed along the wayside. But he has kept them in peat moss in a cool place, and Bill has advised him that they are "replantable." So the roots that gave such joy to its finder just a few weeks ago will probably return to the earth.

When comparing the resiliency of mown grass to the human spirit, Henry David Thoreau in Walden, or Life in the Woods, wrote: "So our human life but dies down to its roots, and still puts forth its green blade to eternity."

So, maybe the old "man root" will thrive again, and hopefully, Wes Friend's great-grandchildren will also be able to peacefully walk through Garrett County forests or along "a county maintained road" enjoying the simple pleasure of hunting "sang."

RT. 40 LANDMARK PASSING INTO HISTORY — An architectural piece of Addison, Pa.'s, history and the history of the National Road (Route 40) will soon disappear from where it has stood since the late 1800s. The Augustine Carriage Barn, currently being torn down, was built with plans from a pattern book and has two cross gables, four decorative star windows, fleur-de-lis trim over the louvered windows, fish scales for trim over clapboard siding, and a cupola on the top. The roof of this 35x60-foot structure was covered with patterned tin shingles. Located at the west end of Addison, the tavern, stable, and barns were described in the book The Old Pike. The landmark takes its name from Jasper Augustine, a wealthy gentleman farmer, who purchased five contiguous tracts of land which formed his model farm. An Addison area native whose permanent home was in Uniontown, Pa., Augustine used the farm as his summer residence.

Oakland Man Pleads Guilty To Assault

An Oakland man who pleaded guilty to two second degree assault charges during a Garrett County district court hearing recently was handed a three month jail sentence by visiting judge Thomas Lohm.

Les Allen Bittinger, 36, received a 10-year term, all but three months of which was suspended, a $55 fine, and a three-year probation order after the judge's deliberations. Additional charges of three counts each of fourth degree sex offense and perverted practice, and one count each of third degree sex offense and second degree assault, were not prosecuted by the state's attorney's office. Bittinger's November arrest by Garrett Bureau of Investigation detectives stemmed from several incidents of his alleged sexual contact with a juvenile female the previous August.

In other district court news, an Oakland man was convicted on charges of non-support of a minor child and marijuana possession.

Lance Lee Logsdon, 26, was ordered to make back child support payments totaling $8,263 stemming from his February arrest on a warrant obtained by the state's attorney's office. As sheriff's deputies were taking Logsdon into custody at his High Street residence they discovered a bag of marijuana and a marijuana cigarette in his pockets. An additional charge of marijuana possession resulted in another guilty plea from Logsdon, who was handed 30 days in jail and three years of supervised probation by Judge Ralph Burnett. A third charge of possession of drug paraphernalia was not prosecuted.

William Michael Dillon, 20, Oakland, pleaded guilty to marijuana possession and was handed a 30-day jail term and a $200 fine. His July arrest came after Garrett County Narcotics Task Force detectives served a search warrant at a South Second Street home, where they discovered a quantity of marijuana stems and seeds in his bedroom, and in a common living room they located a bag of material packaged as if to resemble a large quantity of LSD.

Arrested at the same time as Dillon was Benjamin Joseph Farmer, 18, Oakland, who was handed a probation before judgment (PBJ) after he pleaded guilty to marijuana possession. Judge Burnett also imposed a 30-day sentence, all but two days of which was suspended, levied a $200 fine, and gave Farmer one year of supervised probation and 40 hours of community service. Farmer and a third suspect arrested during the same incident, Geoffrey Allen Reams, 19, Oakland, were both not prosecuted on charges of possession of counterfeit LSD with intent to distribute.

Brandie DeWitt, 21, Oakland, pleaded guilty to second degree assault and was handed a 30-day sentence, all but four days of which was suspended, and fined $100. Her June arrest by the Oakland City Police came after she assaulted another woman during what was reported as a domestic-related argument. DeWitt entered a "not guilty" plea to violation of an ex parte order, and was exonerated of that charge.

After pleading guilty to being intoxicated to the point of posing a danger to himself and others, and disturbing the peace, Walter Lee Paugh, 48, Kitzmiller, was handed a 150-day suspended sentence and placed on one year of supervised probation. His July arrest by sheriff's deputies came after he was apprehended staggering in the traffic lanes of Maryland Highway near Loch Lynn.

Thomas Ray Thorne, 20, Mtn. Lake Park, pleaded guilty to carrying a concealed deadly weapon and a pair of marijuana possession charges and was handed a 120-day suspended sentence and was placed on two years of supervised probation.

Thorne's first arrest at the hands of sheriff's deputies came in May, when several bags of marijuana were found in his car during a Deep Creek Lake area traffic stop. State troopers arrested him in August after a search during a traffic stop along Interstate 68 uncovered a marijuana cigarette, a small set of scales, and a knife under the driver's seat. Two additional charges of possession of drug paraphernalia were not prosecuted.

A stet ruling was issued to Nita Ann Kight, 45, Crellin, who faced two counts each of second degree assault, disturbing the peace, and false imprisonment, while two other defendants in the same case, Shawn Strawser, 23, and Melissa Dawn Alexander, 25, both also of Crellin, were handed stet rulings on charges of false imprisonment and disturbing the peace.

The trio had been arrested by sheriff's deputies in July after a domestic dispute during which they allegedly used two cars to pin in a third vehicle on the Crellin Underwood Road bridge. Kight reportedly pounded on the window of the "trapped" car and challenged one of its two occupants to "get out and fight."

Kenneth Wayne Friend, 42, Swanton, was handed a stet ruling on a second degree assault charge. His July arrest by state troopers stemmed from a domestic incident at the Friendsville Road residence of his girlfriend, whom he allegedly pushed to the floor during an argument.

Eva Catherine Sweitzer, 46, Bloomington, faced charges of second degree assault, disturbing the peace, and harassment that were placed onto the stet docket. Sheriff's deputies arrested Sweitzer in July for allegedly assaulting another woman during an argument at the suspected victim's Maryland Highway residence. She was also accused of calling the woman on several occasions and yelling at her over the phone.

A second degree assault charge faced by Geraldine Marie Birchland, 35, Accident, was placed onto the stet docket. Her June arrest by state troopers came after she allegedly threw a battery at her boyfriend during a domestic incident at their Accident-Friendsville Road residence. He reportedly sustained a wound that drew blood.

Robert Carl Gaborko, 22, Vermilion, Ohio, faced a felony theft charge that was stetted. He was arrested by state troopers in July after he reportedly took a number of items from the Friendsville residence of an acquaintance.

April Lelane Miske and Rodney Dominic Miske, both 31 and both of Ohiopyle, Pa., were each not prosecuted on charges of felony theft and misdemeanor theft. They had been accused of the April theft of a refrigerator and 10 bundles of shingles from a Friendsville residence they were renting at the time, and were arrested by state troopers in June.

Jack Alfred Kight Jr., 24, Oakland, was not prosecuted of malicious destruction of property and disturbing the peace, charges filed after he allegedly yelled outside an Oakland woman's home at 4:30 a.m. and kicked her car in the parking lot. Sheriff's deputies arrested Kight immediately following the June incident.

Timothy Lawrence Ferguson, 22, Oakland, was not prosecuted on a trespassing charge filed after his July arrest by sheriff's deputies. The charge stemmed from a dispute with a neighbor over use of their lane.

DWIs/DUIs

Several cases involving charges of driving while intoxicated (DWI) or driving while under the influence of alcohol and/or drugs were heard in district court recently.

Darrell Ray Ravenscroft, 26, N.C., pleaded guilty to DWI and was handed a one-year sentence, half of which was suspended, fined $555, and was placed on year of supervised probation by visiting judge Timothy Finan.

Robert Lee Hovermale Jr., 51, Pa., pleaded guilty to DWI and was handed a one-year sentence, all but two months of which was suspended, fined $300, and was placed on two years of supervised probation by Judge Burnett. Hovermale was also found to be in violation of two previous DWI probation agreements, both of which were continued as sanctions were withheld.

Gary Brent Welch, 44, Md., pleaded guilty to DWI and was handed a six-month sentence, four months of which were suspended, fined $555, and was placed on two years of supervised probation.

Daniel Walter Stern, 47, Pa., pleaded guilty to DUI and was handed a two-month sentence, 45 days of which were suspended, fined $555, and was placed on one year of supervised probation.

Sharon Ann Conlee, 41, Md., pleaded guilty to DWI and was handed a six-month sentence, all but eight days of which was suspended, fined $655, and was placed on two years of supervised probation.

John Ryerson Mead, 32, Md, pleaded guilty to DWI and was handed a 30-day sentence, with all but two days suspended, fined $300, and was placed on one year of supervised probation.

Henry Joseph Michaels, 49, Pa., pleaded guilty to DWI and was fined $555, handed a 60-day suspended sentence, and was placed on one year of supervised probation by Judge Finan.

Matthew Douglas Carter, 23, Md., pleaded guilty to DWI and was fined $455, handed a 90-day suspended sentence, and was placed on one year of supervised probation.

4-H Club News

COUNTRY KIDS
by Amanda Bowers

The September meeting of the Country Kids 4-H Club was held at the Deer Park Community Building. Adam Rexroad led pledges, Brittany Morgan gave a report about the Garrett County Fair, and Sharon Harvey gave a report on farm tours.

Club members decided this year's hayride will take place at the Barnards' house at 2 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 21. Participants were reminded to bring a covered dish.

Members who are planning to enter a beef in the 2002 Garrett County Fair must have steers weighed between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 3, or Saturday, Nov. 10. The Livestock Association dinner is set for 1 p.m. this Sunday, Sept. 30. Those attending are asked to bring a covered dish.

Members will be working at the Autumn Glory Festival petting zoo, and are asked to assist with set-up on Friday, Oct. 12, at 3 p.m. in the Oakland town parking lot. The following people are reminded to bring these items: the Barnards — a woven fence, twine, and a baby calf; Bret and Derek DeWitt — a puppy (and call Freddie about a pot-bellied pig); and Sharon, Charlie, Andrew, and Nicole — goats and ducks.

Club members will tour the corn maze at 6:30 p.m. this evening, Thursday, Sept. 28. Persons over 12 will pay a $5 admission fee, and children under 12 will be charged $3.

Attend Victims' Assistance Event

Several Garrett County victims' advocates participated in the annual National Organization for Victim Assistance (NOVA) conference, held recently in Edmonton, Alberta. Dove Center executive director Linda Spassil, Dove Center staffers Victoria Thomas and Kristin Mortin, and Garrett County Family Violence Coalition coordinator Peggy Nelson joined other victims' advocates from across the United States, Canada, and 14 other nations for the 27th annual NOVA event.

Conference participants received specialized training in victim services, and exchanged ideas and information with representatives of other victim services programs from around the world. "Although we work primarily with domestic violence and sexual assault victims, we had an opportunity to learn about other programs that provide invaluable support services to people who suffer as a result of criminal acts and tragedies," commented a member of the Garrett County delegation.

NOVA has a number of assistance groups currently operating in New York City and Washington, D.C., where they are offering assistance to the many rescue workers, families, and local residents affected by the recent terrorist attacks.

Treating Head Lice in Children and Adults

Head lice infestation is a commonly experienced parasitic infection. The problem involves eggs (referred to as nits) and the tiny insect. After hatching from eggs, young nymphs emerge and feed on human blood. The adult insect seeks more human blood in order to survive. Millions of persons are affected each year. Preschool and elementary school children and their families are the groups most commonly infected.

For children under 2 years of age, use of a lice nit comb is the only treatment generally recommended. For children over 2 years, shampoos are considered safe and effective. The active ingredient in the shampoo kills the insect but not the eggs. Therefore, a repeat shampoo treatment often is recommended after 7 to 10 days to kill any newly hatched nymphs.

Northern Middle Develops Reading Reward Program

Northern Middle School is in the process of creating a year-long reading incentive and reward program to help students develop a love toward reading for pleasure.

The Reading Committee has set up the program with themes, required criteria and goals, and a way to keep track of the reading. The committee is looking for sponsors to help with the rewards and incentives it would like to give to all the participants.

"We are hoping that by soliciting for businesses' help and support, we might be able to have enough rewards to have a school-wide celebration after each time line," a committee member said.

Businesses wanting to help may contact the Reading Committee, which will then get back in touch with the business. The numbers at Northern Middle School are 301-895-5075 or 301-746-8165.

The themes for October are fantasy and non-fiction. Parents are asked to sign reading logs in planners on a weekly basis.

"With the commitment of parents, teachers, and the community, we hope to foster a love of reading in all of our students," a committee member said.

WINNER OF RARE BOOK ANNOUNCED — Cindy Daniels, McHenry, was the winner of a first edition autographed copy of James A. Michener's novel Space in the Literacy Council's raffle held during the Garrett County Fair. Michener, a noted 20th century author, was the recipient of a Pulitzer Prize for literature in 1942 and 1950. The book was part of a private library owned by the late Dr. R. McCullough, Friendsville, which was donated to the council by the family. Daniels said the book will be a special memory for her because she knew the McCullough family while growing up in the Friendsville area. Dr. McCullough was the superintendent of schools for Garrett County in the 1970s. The Literacy Council offers free tutoring to the non- and low-level reader in Garrett County.

Autumn Glory Festival Will Highlight Mountain Heritage

The agenda for the 34th annual Autumn Glory Festival, October 10-14, includes activities and events highlighting the heritage of the area, according to festival organizers.

For an overview of local history, visitors may wish to make the Garrett County Historical Museum a first stop of their tour. The museum, which will be open daily during the festival from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. except during the parade, displays documents, artifacts, clothing, photographs, and the bric-a-brac of everyday life reflecting the growth and development of the county. Located at 107 S. Second Street, the museum does not charge for admission; however, donations are accepted.

To glimpse the architecture of the Victorian era, one may choose to take a walking or driving self-guided tour of Mtn. Lake Park, beginning at the historic Ticket House at the intersection of Spruce and G streets. To enhance the Victorian era experience, horse-drawn wagon tours with a guide will also be available. Tour hours are: Friday, Oct. 12, noon - 5 p.m.; Saturday, Oct. 13, 3-6 p.m.; and Sunday, Oct. 14, 3-5 p.m. For more information, persons may call 301-334-4314.

The Kitzmiller Heritage Expo will recreate the town's old-time mountain coal mining community. Guided tours will be offered, along with visits to the mining museum and demonstrations and crafts related to the coal-mining heritage. Visitors to Kitzmiller are also invited to take part in a fishing rodeo, to see fly-tying demonstrations and an apple butter boil, and sample homemade refreshments. Kitzmiller tours are available free of charge on Friday, 1-6 p.m. For information, persons may call 301-453-3199.

Recognized as one of the country's finest examples of Queen Anne architecture, the newly restored 1884 Oakland Train Station will be open for free tours during the festival. Persons may visit the station on Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and on Sunday from noon to 4 p.m. For information, persons may call 301-334-2691.

Sponsored by the Garrett County Arts Council, the Heritage Craft Fest will feature 85 regional artisans displaying traditional crafts as well as contemporary works. To be held at the Broad Ford Elementary School (607 Harvey Winters Road), this is a juried exhibit and admission is free. Persons may call 301-334-6580 for more information.

The Autumn Glory Festival is presented by the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce. For other AGF information, persons may call 301-387-4386.

"Stop The Hate Week" Program Slated At FSU

To kick off the second annual "Stop the Hate Week" at Frostburg State University, the FSU Diversity Center will present the nationally acclaimed program "Journey to a Hate-Free Millennium" on Monday, Oct. 8, at 7 p.m. in the Lane University Center's Alice R. Manicur Assembly Hall.

This program, which is free and open to the public, is the only project in which the family of University of Wyoming student Matthew Shepard has agreed to participate since the beating death of their son in 1998.

"There is a tremendous need to address these issues with our young people in order to create a world where every person is accepted and valued, and therefore insure that what happened to Matthew and our family will never happen again," said Judy Shepard, Matthew's mother.

During the program, a film titled Journey to a Hate-Free Millennium, will be shown, which is the work of two Los Angeles filmmakers, Brent Scarpo and Martin Bedogne. This documentary focuses on many of the recent hate crimes that have captured national attention, and it features interviews with family and friends of many of the victims, as well as politicians. Its intent is to challenge viewers to question the purpose of hate in the country, to discover its causes, to explore what happens to those who choose to hate, and to consider what might be possible if hate could be eliminated from society.

Scarpo will present the film as part of the program at FSU. Audience interaction and questions are encouraged, especially in light of the recent terrorist attacks in the United States and their aftermath.

For more information about this program and other "Stop the Hate Week" events, persons may contact the FSU Diversity Center at 301-687-4050.

4-H Club News

TRAILBLAZERS

The August meeting of the Trailblazers 4-H Club was held at the Corn on the Cob booth Monday during the fair. Helping at the booth were: Leeann Ingram, Emily Green, Jennifer, Emily, and Sarah Cosner, Nick, Jenna, and Carey Rush, Cody Ferguson, Diana Mayfield, and Lois Dever.

The September meeting of the club was held September 20 at Yough Glades Elementary School. We won the $1,000 prize for Cow Patty Bingo at the fair, and we are to think of ways we would like to spend it. Members discussed how they did during the fair. Travis Sines reported on the state lawn tractor driving contest, and Diana Mayfield reported on the state fashion revue. She received reserve champion in the class of Regular Wear. Erica Green handed out baby beef raffle tickets. All raffle tickets are to be turned in at the October meeting.

The annual Livestock Association meeting is set for September 30 at 1 p.m. at the fairgrounds. We decided to do Adopt-A-Highway October 6 at 9 a.m. We are to meet at the Yough Glades parking lot.

Erica Green told us about the fall steer weighin, which will be Nov. 3 and Nov. 10 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. We have to go to the weigh-in to take a steer to the fair. National 4-H Week is October 7-13, and we are to wear our 4-H pins. We then did a pumpkin craft, led by Emily and Erica Green and Travis Sines. Refreshments were served by Emily and Erica Green and Travis Sines.

Our next meeting will be at Cove Run Farms Corn Maze on October 20 at 7 p.m. Bring a flashlight!

Farming On The Mountaintop

Maryland Welcomes White House Initiatives On Agriculture Bill

by Marie Beaudette
Capital News Service

WASHINGTON — Maryland lawmakers and farm groups are lauding the Bush administration's newly released farm policy, which calls for increased funding for conservation and more equal distribution of government money to farmers.

Rep. Wayne Gilchrest, R-Kennedyville, said the recommendations would benefit those with small and medium farms who have not seen much money from traditional crop subsidies. Those subsidies tend to go to farmers growing commodities like grain or cotton.

There were few details and no dollar figures attached to the broad proposals, which were released last Wednesday by Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman.

The administration plans ask farm policymakers to consider increased incentives for farmers to practice conservation, tailored programs that account for differences in farm size and production methods, and safety nets to help farmers through unexpected disasters.

Asking for increased conservation funding is a departure from traditional Republican ideology, but the Associated Press quoted Veneman as saying President Bush reviewed and approved the policy himself.

"Conservation policy must pursue a portfolio of instruments, including stewardship incentives on working farmland or retirement of environmentally sensitive land to respond to Americans' growing expectations about agriculture's role in promoting and protecting environmental quality," said a statement issue by the USDA.

Gilchrest said he was "very, very pleased with Secretary Veneman's proposals," which seem to be in line with a plan pushed by him and Rep. Ron Kind, D-Wis.

The House Agriculture Committee has already approved a 10-year, $170 billion farm bill that would expand traditional crop subsidies, most of which goes to a small percentage of the largest farmers in the nation. Gilchrest and Kind have proposed shifting about $2 billion from farm subsidies toward conservation incentives.

"Anybody who lives in an area with small farms and has not benefited from the commodities payments, will benefit," from the administration's proposals, Gilchrest said. "I think the redistribution of those commodities payments is in order."

Gilchrest and Kind had planned to offer their own proposal as an amendment to the committee's bill, which was set to go to the full House earlier this month, but those plans were sidetracked by the Sept. 11 attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

Maryland Farm Bureau officials said they hope the release of the administration proposals will help put the farm bill back on Congress' agenda.

"We think it's a good comprehensive review of some of the problems and challenges the farming industry faces, and we hope to further study the whole proposal," said Valerie Connelly, director of government relations for the Maryland Farm Bureau.

"We hope that it will be a good guiding tool as Congress continues to debate the whole farm bill and we hope that it will move the bill back to the agenda for consideration in Congress because we have important programs that are going to expire soon," she said.

Grain Producers Board Seeking Grant Proposals

The Maryland Grain Producers Utilization Board (MGPUB) is currently seeking grant proposals for the year 2002. The organization administers the Maryland Grain Checkoff Program that was formed by referendum in 1991.

MGPUB's mission is to increase the profitability of Maryland grain production and to improve the public's understanding of agriculture using checkoff investment to support education, promotion, and research.

Funds are spent on each crop in the same ratio as they are collected. This year MGPUB is seeking proposals for funding with an emphasis on research projects and programs to resolve the Canada goose and deer overpopulation; barley research and activities to support a Maryland-based ethanol plant; projects to expand the general public's awareness and appreciation of agriculture; and to provide marketing assistance/advice to grain farmers.

MGPUB will be accepting proposals until December 1, 2001, for funding in 2002. MGPUB will consider funding part of a large project with another party/parties. Proposals are evaluated and approved at the MGPUB funding meeting in January. For more information and complete MGPUB Research Proposal Guidelines, persons may contact Lynne Hoot at 410-956-5771 or visit the web site at www.marylandgrain.com.

Applications should be postmarked no later than December 1, 2001.

Poultry Producers Like China's Entry In World Trade Organization

by Marie Beaudette
Capital News Service

WASHINGTON — Maryland poultry producers are welcoming China's entry into the World Trade Organization this week, a move that could open vast new markets for U.S.-produced chicken.

The United States currently exports $400 million in chicken a year to China and Hong Kong, a number that could grow to $1 billion in the next two years, officials say.

No specific Maryland export numbers were available, and industry officials said much of the chicken that goes to China comes from Gulf Coast states. But they also said that an opportunity of the magnitude that China offers can only help producers in Maryland.

Tita Cherrier, a spokeswoman for Salisbury-based Perdue Farms, said China's entry into the WTO would be "very positive for both the poultry industry and our company."

"It would also justify increasing our own production and labor force which is, of course, going to be good for the state of Maryland," Cherrier said.

China's market is now a "drop in the bucket" compared to what it could be, said Tyson Foods spokesman Ed Nicholson. Tyson, which has a production complex in Berlin, is the No. 1 chicken producer in the country.

Maryland is the eighth-largest producer of broiler chicken in the nation. About 36 percent of the state's total cash farm income was from broilers in 1999, according to the Delmarva Poultry Institute.

China first opened its markets in 1999, when it signed the U.S.-China Agricultural Cooperation Agreement, which lifted a ban on chicken imports and recognized the U.S. meat inspection system.

Later that year, the two countries signed a bilateral agreement that will be formalized by China's admission to the WTO. That agreement will open more ports, increase the number of potential buyers, and, by 2004, lower the tariff on U.S. chicken from 20 percent to 10 percent.

The old rules slowed down the system of poultry delivery to China, said Richard Lobb, a spokesman for the National Chicken Council. Now that China is a member of the WTO, it is subject to the organization's oversight power, which Lobb predicted would have significant power in further opening up China's market of more than 1.2 billion people.

Lobb said he expects the chicken export market in China to grow by about 10 percent each year.

Lobb also said there is more demand for dark meat than white meat in China. That means more chickens can be raised for white meat for the domestic market, where white meat is in demand, and there will be a market overseas for the remaining dark meat.

"It's a business that benefits the entire industry," Lobb said.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture also welcomed China's entry into the WTO as an important step for all American farmers.

"For American farmers and ranchers, China's entry into the rules-based WTO trading system means significantly increased access to the world's most populous market," said Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman. "When fully implemented, China's commitments could add approximately $2 billion a year to the U.S. agricultural exports."

Watch Out for Silo Gas

Silo gas, formed as newly stored silage ferments, can cause serious injuries — severe respiratory distress, permanent damage to lungs, and even death. In late summer and early fall, when silos are being filled, the danger is at its peak. Corn silage forms more silo gas than other crops.

Silo gas begins to form immediately after forage is put into a silo. Silo gas includes nitrogen oxide, which changes to nitrogen dioxide, NO_2, in the presence of oxygen. Nitrogen dioxide, not to be confused with nitrous oxide or "laughing gas," is a highly corrosive, toxic gas, which forms nitric acid when mixed with water. It is heavier than air and displaces oxygen. Silo gas also contains carbon dioxide, which is not toxic, but is heavier than air and displaces oxygen. When inhaled, the nitrogen dioxide in silo gas mixes with the moisture in the body, forming nitric acid. This causes severe burning and scarring of the lungs and other parts of the respiratory system. Since it is heavier than air, silo gas will settle on the surface of the silage and flow down silo chutes.

People exposed to silo gas may collapse and die from the gas or lack of oxygen. They may go into respiratory distress, fall down the silo chute, or receive respiratory burns. Victims of silo gas have been known to die many hours later, sometimes in their sleep, from pulmonary edema, the buildup of fluid in the lungs from the burning.

Anyone who has been exposed to silo gas should get fresh air immediately and see a doctor, even if they feel better after getting fresh air. To prevent silo gas exposure, the following steps are recommended:

* Stay out of the silo for two to three weeks after filling. This is the peak period of silo gas formation. Keep the silo room closed off from the rest of the barn, and ventilate it to remove any gas that flows down the chute.
* Before you enter the silo for the first time, run the forage blower for 30 minutes, and leave it running while inside. Ventilate the chute and silo room as well. Have someone with you outside the silo to go for help if needed.
* If you must enter the silo to level off or set up an unloader after filling, do so immediately after the last load is in. Do not wait until after supper or the next day. The blower should be running while you are inside.
* Be aware that the forage blower air may not adequately ventilate a partly filled silo, since silo gas settles down on the surface. Leave silo doors open to allow gas to escape, but be sure to close off and ventilate the silo room.
* Invest in portable gas monitors to test for nitrogen dioxide and oxygen levels. This is the only way to be certain the atmosphere is safe to enter.

Eating Grapes Can Protect Heart, Slow Aging Process
(reprinted from Sept. 2001 issue of The Grower)

Research done at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., shows consuming grapes can lead to a healthy cardiovascular system and a longer life. Subjects in the study drank about two cups of grape juice per day for two weeks. Researchers then found a decreased tendency for the subject's blood to form clots. They also found lower levels of a potent free radical in blood while the subjects had increased levels of the antioxidant vitamin E and nitric oxide, a molecule that reduces clot formation and relaxes blood vessels.

The natural mixture of flavonoids in grapes brought about the benefits, researchers believe. When the main grape flavonoids were isolated they were not as beneficial as when combined.

Flavonoid-rich foods such as fresh grapes can help slow aging, says Michael Roizen, who helped conduct the medical research. Roizen has called flavonoids the safety patrol for the cardiovascular system. "Grapes are wonderful because they contain the flavonoids that decrease aging of the arteries and resveratrol that decreases aging of the immune system," said Roizen.

Resveratrol is a phytonutrient found in the skin of grapes that helps keep the immune system young, which decreases the risk of cancer, stroke, heart disease, and memory loss.

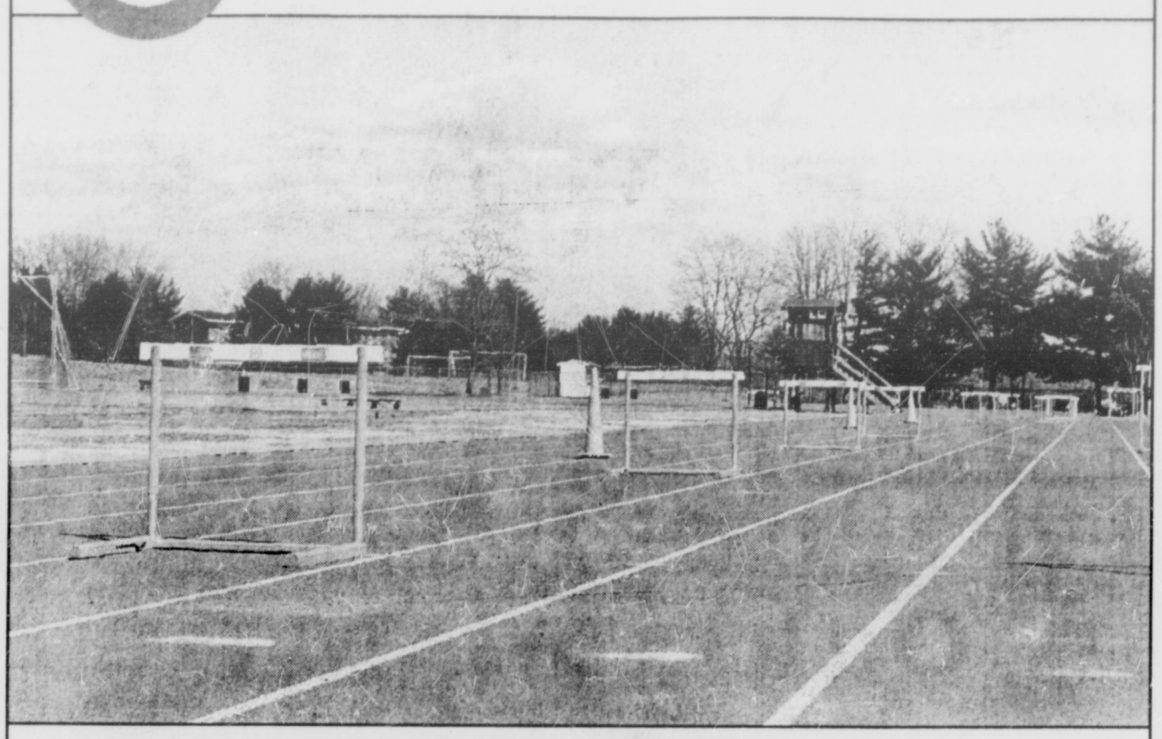
Over the Hurdle



At times, we watch the apparently impossible become reality. How unbelievable that an athlete could clear such a high hurdle and land safely on the other side. Yet, it happens over and over again. What is the secret?

There are really no secrets. As with so many other seemingly impossible challenges in life, instruction, practice, belief, and a source of support are the tools of success which can catapult us to unknown heights. At that very time we feel the hurdle is most insurpassable, we can recognize and utilize God, our ultimate source of support.

Each Sabbath, may we strengthen our belief in our Source as we study His Word and worship Him with the knowledge that "With God nothing shall be impossible."(Luke 1:37) You will clear any hurdle and vault safely to the other side.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

For Your Sake

Sept. 30, 2001

Background Scripture:
John 11:1-44.
Devotional Reading:
John 11:17-27.

In the story of Lazarus there are some interesting uses of the word "love." The first of these is when word first reaches Jesus about the illness of his friend Lazarus. The sisters of Lazarus, Mary and Martha, send Jesus this message: "Lord, he whom you love is ill" (11:3). It would have been enough to simply tell Jesus that Lazarus was seriously ill, but Mary and Martha remind Jesus that he loves Lazarus. They are presuming upon the special friendship which their family has enjoyed with Jesus. Isn't that a bit like our prayers—we remind God of something we know he already knows. We don't have to tell him all these things, but we put them in for emphasis.

The second reference to the love of Jesus comes when he arrives in Bethany and goes to the tomb of Lazarus. He is deeply moved by the weeping of Mary and some of the other mourners. When they show him the tomb of Lazarus, John tells us simply: "Jesus wept. So the Jews said, 'See how he loved him!' But some of them said, 'Could not he who opened the eyes of the blind man have kept his man from dying?'" (11:35-37). Jesus wept, not at the death of Lazarus—for he intended to raise him—but because he was moved by the grief of Mary and Martha.

If Jesus Loves Us....

It is a fair question, isn't it? If Jesus loves us then why doesn't he keep us from disabling illness and even death itself? Why do we have to suffer tragedy and loss? But, as we have previously noted, God does not always save us from our crosses but on them. Jesus did not come into the world to raise millions of the dead as he raised Lazarus. He came, rather, to make us victors over death. Raising Lazarus from the dead was a sign pointing to the truth that Jesus is Lord of both the living and the dead. In raising Lazarus from his tomb, Jesus is assuring us that "I am the resurrection and the life; he who believes in me, though he die, yet shall he live..." (11:25).

The delay of Jesus at the news of Lazarus' illness was an opportunity to demonstrate a greater level of love. He delayed, not despite the fact that he loved Lazarus, but because he loved him. Sometimes God in his infinite wisdom, knowing what we cannot know or understand, seems to delay in responding to our need. We see it as a lack of response to our prayers, but that is simply because we see only the short run picture. As Martha and Mary said to Jesus, "Lord, if you had been here my brother would not have died," so we reproach our Lord because we think he has ignored or refused our plea. But the delay, although it may frustrate and discourage us, may, like the death and raising of Lazarus, ultimately be to the glory of God and his son Jesus. That is why Jesus told his disciples, "Lazarus is dead; and for your sake I am glad that I was not there, so that you may believe" (11:14,15).

Let Us Also Go

It is interesting to note the various reactions to Jesus' mysterious delay. Realizing that going up to Jerusalem probably means great danger, Thomas, with more courage than faith, says to the disciples: "Let us also go, that we may die with him" (11:16). Not understanding how it would play out did not deter Thomas from committing himself to go with Jesus. Are there not times when we need to be able to do as Thomas did?

When Jesus arrives in Bethany, Martha greets Jesus with a hardly-disguised reproach: "Lord, if you had been here my brother would not have died" (11:21). When Jesus went to the tomb of Lazarus, Mary met him with the same complaint. Are there not times when we want to say something similar?

Mary's reaction at the tomb is also rather remarkable. She and Martha were obviously looking for a miraculous raising of Lazarus—even at this late date—but when Jesus tells her: "Take away the stone" (11:30), Mary is reluctant: "Lord, by this time there will be an odor, for he has been dead four days" (11:39). Isn't it strange how we can be both so trustful and distrustful in the same situation?

It is for our sake that God may not answer our prayers in the way that we ask or in the time that we ask—but he does love us and he does answer.

TV PIPELINE

Six Feet Under actor played Jesus

By Taylor Michaels
©TVData Features Syndicate

Jeremy Sisto

Q: What can you tell me about the haunting theme song for HBO's Six Feet Under? And didn't the actor who plays Billy on that show also play Jesus in a TV movie? –P. Morgan, Pottsville, Pa.

A: Thomas Newman (American Beauty) composed that haunting main title theme (which you can download and play at the hbo.com Website) especially for this dazzling series. And yes, Jeremy Sisto, who is featured as volatile Billy Chenowith on Six Feet Under, also played the title role in Jesus on CBS in the spring of 2000.

Q: Watching syndicated reruns of The Big Valley made me wonder: When did the show originally air, and whatever happened to Richard Long and Peter Breck? –Pat Sikes, Winter Haven, Fla.

A: After playing Jarrod in The Big Valley, which ran on ABC from 1965-69, Long had a modest hit in Nanny and the Professor (ABC 1970-71), but he died in 1974 of a heart ailment, when he was only 47 years old.

Now 72, Breck – who played Nick on Valley – most recently appeared in the 1999 movie Enemy Action, which co-starred Randolph Mantooth of Emergency! Recent TV guest credits include the syndicated L.A. Heat and the revival of The Outer Limits, as well as a voice appearance on the animated Batman: Gothic Knights series.

Q: I seem to remember seeing John Glenn on either The $64,000 Question or Name That Tune. Am I right? –Shirley Long, Erhard, Minn.

A: Yes. In 1957, after setting a transcontinental speed record from California to New York, then-Maj. John Glenn appeared on two game shows, I've Got a Secret and Name That Tune.

Q: Did Mr. Lyle from The Pretender play the groom in the movie remake of Father of the Bride? –D. Tanenbaum, Columbus, Ohio.

A: No, Jamie Denton played Mr. Lyle. That was George Newbern, more recently from the TNT Wall Street drama Bull, playing groom Bryan MacKenzie in Father of the Bride and its sequel.

In Focus

Christine Lahti (Chicago Hope) stars in The Pilot's Wife, a movie based on the best seller, Sunday, Sept. 30, on CBS.

Lahti plays Kathryn Lyons, whose husband, Jack, (John Heard, Pollock) is killed when the plane he is piloting explodes off the coast of Ireland.

Lyons suspects there is more to his death than investigator Robert Hart (Campbell Scott, Hamlet) is telling. She and her daughter travel to London and Ireland and learn the truth about her late husband's double life.

Wednesday

Larry Joe Campbell plays Andy, the brother-in-law and co-worker of Jim, in According to Jim, airing Wednesdays on ABC.

Education Board Association Sets Annual Conference

The Maryland Association of Boards of Education (MABE) will hold its annual three-day conference Oct. 3-5 at the Clarion Resort Fontainebleau Hotel in Ocean City. This year's conference theme is "Learning and Leading: Quality Boards = Quality Education."

Kathy Gemberling, co-author of the National School Boards Association's new publication, The Key Work of School Board's Guidebook, will conduct an Oct. 2 and 3 "early-bird workshop," providing extensive information on how to use data in everyday educational decisions covering accountability, alignment, and continuous improvement. At the opening luncheon on Oct. 3, keynote speaker Gary Marx, president and founder of the Center for Public Outreach, will present an update on "Ten Trends That Will Profoundly Impact Education in the 21st Century."

Four Wednesday afternoon workshops will offer: "Continued Conversation With Gary Marx," an informal discussion of educational trends and their implications for schools in the 21st century; "Data Driven Decision Making" with Kathy Gemberling, who will review the key elements school boards need to consider in a data driven decision making process; "Interest-Based Bargaining," which will demonstrate how to use this process to reach agreements with unions that foster cooperation, collaboration, and shared decision making; and "Student Achievement in Maryland," an interactive discussion with Dr. Nancy Grasmick, Maryland State Superintendent, about the status of student achievement in the state, the state's intervention plans, and ways educators can continue to collaborate to assure student success.

MABE's annual business meeting will be held from 3:45-6:30 p.m. on Wednesday afternoon. At 9 p.m. Wednesday evening, informal sharing sessions will feature board committee structures and collaborative decision making. The Maryland Caucus of Black School Board Members (MCBSBM) will hold an informal round-table discussion.

The vendor exhibit hall will be open all day Thursday. Nine workshops, to be presented Thursday morning and afternoon, will be followed by a town meeting focusing on the alignment of state and local system partnerships to address student achievement issues.

MABE past presidents will be honored Thursday evening at the Presidents' Reception and Dinner. Caroline County Board of Education president Dane A. Coleman will receive the prestigious Charles W. Willis Award for outstanding school board service. Student musicians from the visual and performing arts program of Wicomico County Public Schools will provide music for the festivities.

Friday morning will begin with a group breakfast, at which motivational speaker Dr. Brooks P. Coleman Jr. will discuss "Blast Off to New Horizons ... Leading the Way Into the 21st Century." Informative mini-rounds featuring best practices from 10 counties will round out the morning program. MABE's newly elected president for 2001-2002 will preside at the closing luncheon.

This year's Conference Program Committee members are: co-chairmen Terry Troy (Harford) and Carolyn Ross-Holmes (Baltimore County), Donna Truesdell (Allegany), Camay Murphy (Baltimore City), Phyllis Ettinger (Baltimore County), Donald Wade (Charles), Madeleine Collins (Garrett), Patricia Gordon (Howard), Faye Lister (Queen Anne's), Mary Reeser (Talbot), J. Herbert Hardin (Washington), and George Whitehead (Wicomico).

The new board member orientation, co-sponsored by the Maryland State Department of Education, will begin with a continental breakfast at the Clarion Resort Fontainebleau Hotel on Oct. 2 at 8:30 a.m. and will conclude before the conference opening lunch.

GED Exam Set At Garrett CC

A Maryland High School Diploma GED (General Equivalency Diploma) exam is set for Saturday, Dec. 1, at Garrett Community College. Persons age 16 and older who are not currently enrolled in the public school system may apply to take the exam. The application deadline is Thursday, Nov. 1, and the $45 testing fee is due at the time of application.

The December 1 exam will be the last opportunity for retesting by individuals who tested and passed portions but not the entire five sections of the GED exam in the last five years. Beginning in January, retesting on the current exam will not be possible, as the Maryland Department of Education will implement a new exam at that time. When the new test is in place, individuals will need to take the entire new exam.

"If you currently need to retest, it would be advisable to do so before the exam is revised," said GCC spokesperson Patricia Baer. For further information, persons may contact Baer at GCC's Oakland Center at 301-334-8304.

Water Aerobics Class Scheduled At Garrett Rehab

The Garrett County Memorial Hospital Arthritis/Fibromyalgia Support Group will be holding a low impact water aerobics class at Garrett Rehab Services on Oct. 2 at 6:30 p.m.

The session, which will be led by a physical therapist from Garrett Rehab Services, will focus on stretching and joint mobility.

"Exercising in the water greatly reduces the amount of impact placed on joints," Deana Clester, GCMH wellness coordinator, said. "Water aerobics is a great way for individuals suffering with arthritis to exercise with little or no pain."

The water temperature will be 96 degrees, and participants are to bring a bathing suit or outfit for exercising in water. There will be no charge for this session; however, space is limited so registration is required.

Persons wanting more information on the session or to register may call Clester at 301-533-4295.

Strange BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

• It may be hard to believe, but Madonna once said, "I really wanted to be the new Shirley Temple."

• If you look at a map of Alabama, you won't find the town named "Slapout." It's there, but it's officially been made a part of Holtville. The locals know where it is, though, and they know how it got its odd name. In 1918, a small community grocery store was built there, run by a man named Oscar Peeples. Whenever anyone would ask for an item that Mr. Peeples didn't have in stock, he'd say, "I'm slap out of it, but I'll have it in a day or two." Oscar's son, Colley, still lives in Slapout. He says, "It's a good community. Real quiet. Not much shootin' or killin' like other places."

• A Neanderthal man's brain was actually larger than the brain of a modern human.

• Snakes can get hiccups.

• Everyone is familiar with Sir Walter Scott's lines, "O what a tangled web we weave, / When first we practice to deceive!" However, not everyone agrees with them, and some people have undertaken to reply to his verse in kind. Phyllis McGinley added, "Which leads me to suppose the fact is / We really ought to get more practice." And J.R. Pope added to that, "But when we've practiced quite a while / How vastly we improve our style!" And Willard Espy concluded, "Forget, dear friends, that practice angle! / You'll only tangle up the tangle."

• Jayne Mansfield had an interesting definition of men. She said they are "creatures with two legs and eight hands."

Antiques

by Ralph and Terry Kovel

Desks from past centuries were designed to solve problems of the past. Where to place the inkwell? Could there be a locked drawer or a hidden compartment for valuable papers? Could papers be filed in some meaningful way? Would there be a way to hide work and still have an attractive piece of furniture?

The desk of the 1830s used a "fall front." It looked like a large drawer, but it opened into a flat writing surface in front of a section of small drawers. The clever design hid drawers, a space to store messy work and a writing surface that protruded so you could use it without bumping your knees. The closed desk could be kept against a wall, where it took up less space.

Later, larger and more ornate Victorian pieces came into style. The roll-top desk of Victorian times hid the drawers and writing surface behind a roll-up, slatted top. The Victorian Wooten desk closed two side sections of the desk and all the drawers into a locked "cabinet."

Today's desk must hold a computer monitor, printer and hard drive. It could also have a series of small shelves on top and a few drawers and more storage space on the bottom. Holes are necessary for electrical connections. Like most desks, it is designed to take up as little room as possible. But in the 21st century, it is proper to have the machines and even the papers exposed.

How NOT to Buy a Dog

Here's a letter I recently received from a reader:

"After reading your article about purchasing a dog, I was really ashamed of myself for being so trusting and gullible when I recently bought one.

"I answered an ad in the paper offering Chihuahua pups for $200 each. I explained (to the seller) that I wanted an older dog. She said she had just the dog for me. It was 'drop dead gorgeous,' purebred, a personal pet which she couldn't sell for less than $300 — and she had to have cash. When I asked where to go see it, she said since she lived over an hour from me, she would meet me in between. I met her, liked the dog and gave her the $300 with her promise that she would send me the papers.

"A few days later, I received only a record of the dog's shots. When I called and asked where her pedigree papers were, 'Maria' said she couldn't give me those unless I paid $850.

"My vet examined the dog and asked to see its health certificate, which, of course, I hadn't received. She informed me it is against the law to sell a dog without a health certificate. The dog did not have rabies shots — also against the law.

"After calling 'Maria' many times and leaving messages, she finally called me back. She said she did not have the health certificate, and evaded my request for a receipt. She said she would take the dog back, but when I tried to set up a time and place, she said she would be out of town. There's more, but I don't want to go into all that.

"My vet called the newspaper and found out that 'Maria' advertises seven different breeds.

"Please tell me if you have any suggestions. If she is running a puppy mill, she should be stopped. I am considering calling the police in her city, and maybe that's what I should do."

That's an unfortunate tale, and even worse, this happens far too often. So, what can this reader do? Next week, I'll have information on spotting backyard breeders and puppy mills, and the legal recourse owners may (or may not) have.

Springs Folk Fest To Feature Crafts And Music In Pa.

The 44th annual Springs Folk Festival will take place Friday and Saturday, Oct. 5 and 6, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in Springs, Pa., located three miles north of Grantsville along Rt. 669. A "celebration of the arts, skills, and labors of our forefathers," the two-day event slate includes craft demonstrations, horsedrawn hayrides, music, and food.

Over 140 craftsmen will be on hand to demonstrate skills of pioneer families of the region, including blacksmithing, rail splitting, sheep shearing, and wool spinning. Play will be highlighted as well as work, as the games played by settlers' children will be presented and explained.

Continuous music performances will be offered in the Springs Museum program building and on a nearby open air stage along a wooded trail. Among the many acoustic and a cappella musicians on hand will be the Joe Byler Family of Salisbury, composed of Joe and Naomi Byler and their 11 children ranging in age from 2 to 18. Pittsburgh-area clogger and swing dancer Bob Dunlap will be accompanied by the group Gandydancer from Bluefield, Va. Summit Sounds, a barbershop octet from Uniontown, Pa., will perform, as will the Narvon, Pa.,-based gospel group the Royal Sounds.

Also on the music bill are longtime Springs Folk Fest favorites Maple City Bluegrass Band, which includes members from Salisbury and Meyersdale, Pa., while Windy Ridge, a bluegrass trio that includes Garrett County resident Garland Maust. A children's a capella group from Salisbury's Mountain View Mennonite Church will perform, as will the Mountain Anthems, a youth group from the same congregation.

Chestnut Roots, a historical drama relating the history and legends of Springs, will be presented on both days of the festival. The drama, a staple of the folk fest since it was first presented in 1978, describes the hardships faced by local ancestors in three parts: the adversities faced upon first arriving in America in the early 1800s; their daily lives through the early 1900s; and the adaptations made by the community's young people who moved to cities during the mid and late 20th century.

Among the variety of traditional foods that will be available are Pennsylvania Dutch sausage meals, funnel cakes, bean soup, homemade bread baked in an outdoor kiln, fresh-churned butter, and homemade doughnuts and lollipops.

Admission to the Springs Folk Festival is $5 for adults and $2 for youth ages 6-18, while children under 6 will be admitted free. For further information on the event, or for times of specific performances and programs, persons may call 814-662-4158 or 814-662-2625.
